Long Faction Trails 2-1 InNew Orleans Voting; Former Allies in Lead

Returns in 14 Precincts Swamp "Kingfish's" Candidates.

City Ballots Quietly Under Heavy Guard

Many Women Cast Vote in Test o fSenator's State Power.

New Orleans, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—Returns from 14 scattered precincts tonight gave, for mayor: T. S. Walmsley, 2,502; Francis Williams, 1,583; John Klorer, 1,458. Walmsley is the candidate of the old regular party, which is fighting Long. Williams is another anti-Long candidate and Klorer heads Long's ticket.

New Orleans, Jan. 23 (AP).—Exhibiting equal confidence, Long and anti-Long forces in the city of New Orleans claimed victory late today primary votes in its history was as one of the largest mayoralty turned over for tabulation under the eyes of factional polling officials. Early returns released from political headquarters gave Mayor Walmsley two out of three precincts counted.

Expressions of faith that the voters had sent their slates into office for the next four years came from Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, the old regular organization chieftan, up for reelection after breaking off his alliance with Senator Huey P. Long; from Francis Williams, State public service commissioner and independent who campaigned on a platform to "eliminate Long from Louisiana politics;" and from John Kloorer, civil engineer who was put up by the Long ofrces to buck the city hall machine and the field.

Herbert B. Homes, a business man, submitted his candidacy as the fourth mayoralty aspirant without organization or a formal campaign

Long Claims First Precinct.

Long headquarters claimed that first returns from the first reporting precinct showed 102 votes for Klorer, Long candidate; 71 for Walmsley, 11 for Williams and 1 for Homes.

Klorer headquarters later released returns from the Seventh Precinct of the Tenth Ward, showing Klorer, 45; Walmsley, 78; Williams, 75, and Homes, 3.

Test for Long.

The balloting as admittedly a test of strength for Senator Long, whose five-year dominance of Louisiana politics was made almost the exclusive issue in the bitter campaign of personalities and recriminations.

When Long won his Senate seat in 1930, he pointed with pride to the 38,682 votes he drew in New Orleans to run only 4,000 votes behind Senator Joseph E. Ransdell in the city, where Ransdell was supported by the old regular organization.

A total vote of more than 90,000 was indicated here today, but the turnout was as orderly as it was large, only a score or so arrests resulting from presentation of irregular registration or poll tax papers and from minor fist-fights in the vicinity of the polls. Political observers said more women were in evidence at the polling booths than in any election since equal suffrage.

Patrolled by Special Guard.

The city was patrolled by a special citizens' guard of 300 volunteers, backed by a store of arms and ammunition in a downtown office building, and vested with superpolice powers. This group was in command of an arbitration committee of seven men, representing all factions, empowered to settle all election disputes. The guard was agreed upon by all sides to put an end to a dispute between the State administration and the City Hall, which threatened to array the militia against an army of city police on election day.

Factional commissioners and poll watchers manned their precinct booths before dawn to avoid any squeeze-out in representation and the voting throughout the day.

Mayor Walmsley and Senator Long led the trek of early voters to the polls, casting their ballots in the same silk stocking ward uptown.

Jardine Will Head Wichita University

Wichita, Kans., Jan. 23 (AP).—W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture under President Coolidge and Minister to Egypt in the Hoover Administration, will become president of the University of Wichita at the end of the present school term.

His election to succeed Dr. H. W. Foght, now on leave of absence, was announced today by the board of regents.

328 AAA "Experts" Ordered to Prove It

Classification Must Be Justified or They Will Be Cut Off Pay Roll, McCarl Rules; 289 Others Are in Doubtful Column.

The 328 "experts" on the pay roll of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration sat with furrowed brows last night, intent upon ways and means of justifying their classification as such.

If they can not, February 1 is likely to find them gazing into empty pay envelopes, for Comptroller General McCarl sent a ruling to the Secretary of Agriculture yesterday, demanding particulars.

At the same time, 289 other AAA employes were hoping their division chiefs would speed up the business of classifying them—or they, too, face the prospect of payless paydays henceforth.

Assistant administrators, directors of divisions and chiefs of sections were busy yesterday preparing to prove that "experts" and "specialists" listed on their rolls were bona-fide experts and specialists and necessary to the program.

Since reorganization of the AAA under Chester C. Davis on January 1, there has been some confusion as to whose "experts" are whose.

When McCarl's ruling reached the department yesterday, no one could say quite how many "experts" were affected, and a hurried checkup was begun.

It developed that the AAA employs a total of 328 attorneys, technicians, economists, investigators and special writers, listing all as "experts."

The original idea was that this made it easier to pay them salaries up to $10,000 a year.

At present, the duties of AAA "experts" are many and varied. There is the "expert," who writes speeches for AAA spokesmen on the subject of hogs; another who specializes in cheese; a third who watches a warehouse in which are stored many kinds of tobacco; there are "experts" in information, weather, weights and what the well-dressed farmer will wear.

Even bona-fide experts are subject to the special classifications set up by Executive order for new Government agencies last November, the Comptroller General warned. "And on the basis of the evidence heretofore presented, credit may not be allowed in the account of the disbursing clerk of salary payment to employes carried on the rolls as experts or specialists and whose positions have not been classified as required by law."

Reed Linked In Futile Deal For Ship Mail

By Martha Dalrymple.

In its first effort to link the award of ocean-mail and air-mail contracts, the Senate committee investigating these forms of subsidies yesterday brought out that Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, conducted a useless half-hour Senate filibuster last spring to preserve an ocean mail contract for a steamship line proposed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, already interested in a subsidized air line

William Wallace Atterbury, president of the railroad, and his foreign freight agent, A. J. Ball, made most of the day's revelations, although the junior official's testimony was the most startling.

Ball, portly and slightly pompous, told of the proposal by the Pennsylvania, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Reading Railroads to form the Philadelphia Mail Steamship Co., secure a Government mail contract, and then purchase boats from the United States Lines, which had been in default in payments to the Shipping Board for the vessels.

On March 1, the Senate debated a resolution to provide that the contract should not be awarded until a Senatorial investigation of the company could be made.

Former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown had promised the Pennsylvania officials the contract award, provided they could keep the Senate from passing the resolution before 12:30 p. m. March 1, said Ball. The bids were opened at noon, but half an hour had to elapse before the award could be made.

Senator Reed conducted the necessary filibuster, while the railroad men watched from the gallery.

But they reckoned without the Shipping Board, for after Brown had awarded the contract, the Senate's resolution was rushed to the Shipping Board, which promptly refused to approve the sale of the vessels.

"We had a contract but no boats,

Slum Cleanup Bill Passes House Group

Members Hear Unanimous Approval of Measure; Favor Age Pensions.

The first hurdle was cleared yesterday by the Capper-Norton alley-dwelling bill when the subcommittee on public health, hospitals and charities of the House District Committee announced it would report favorably today to the House District Committee.

Favorable action by the District Committee was predicted by its members and it is believed the measure has a good chance of being passed by the House.

Simultaneously today the subcommittee will report favorably on the Capper-Norton old-age-pension bill. This decision was reached after a hearing yesterday morning at which testimony was divided between the Norton measure and the bill sponsored by Representative Loring M. Black, jr., of New York, a member of the District Committee.

Mrs. Roosevelt Supports Bill.

Not a voice was raised in objection against the alley-clearance bill at the subcommittee hearing, and representatives of the District government, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Council of Social Agencies spoke in favor of the proposal.

Enactment of the bill will inaugurate the widespread substitution of modern living quarters for slum dwellings as advocated by The Post in a recent series of articles.

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday repeated her approval of plans for eliminating alley dwellings. She said she was not discouraged over the delay in housing projects as a result of the question raised by Comptroller General McCarl as to whether the Federal Housing Corporation is legal.

Objection to Measure Met.

Mrs. Rosevelt said she had been informed that legislation would be proposed in Congress to make possible use of Government land in Southwest Washington for housing purposes.

Quack! Quack! It'll Be Duck Soup Under President's Plan

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The duck that furnishes sport for 1,000,000 hunters is to be included in President Roosevelt's recovery program.

A four-point program to help the duck, and incidentally his hunter, was outlined today at the American game conference by Thomas Beck, of Wilton, Conn., recently appointed chairman of the special United States committee on wild life restoration.

"There is evidence of a critical and continuing decline in our wild life resources, especially migratory water fowl," said Beck. "This is due to the destruction and neglect of vast natural breeding and nesting areas."

Beck, who with Prof. Oldo Leopold, of the University of Wisconsin, and J. N. Darling, of Des Moines, will present a report to the President, proposes to make use of some of the 50,000,000 acres of land which will be withdrawn from agriculture.

"Our report will propose the restoration of migratory water fowl nesting areas by purchase of a large number of such areas in the States where these birds naturally multiply if given proper environment and food," Beck told the 600 delegates from practically every State in the Union and province of Canada.

Ickes Given Right to End CWA Graft

Roosevelt to Ask Only $350,000,000 for Job Relief.

Accounting by Hopkins Demanded in House From Gifford.

The Civil Works Administration, Federal employer of 4,000,000 persons, yesterday continued as a major storm center of criticism, charges of graft, demands for extension and threats of discontinuance.

Principal developments were:

President Roosevelt disclosed he will ask only for the original budget estimate of $350,000,000 to extend CWA briefly.

Harry L. Hopkins, works administrator, announced the program will be shut off May 1, as planned.

Protests piled up against curtailment of the works plan.

Charles L. Gifford (Republican) Massachusetts, demanded Hopkins be brought before the House Expenditures Committee to account for spending of the CWA fund.

Secretary Ickes, clothed with authority by President Roosevelt to protect the Public Works Administration from any kind of graft, announced he had established sufficient "safeguards" to make it safe.

The Department of Justice opened investigation of graft cases referred to it by the CWA.

A total of 180,000 workers were ordered dropped in 13 States.

Hopkins Confers With President.

Visibly agitated by the stress exerted upon his administration during the last two days, Harry L. Hopkins yesterday conferred twice with President Roosevelt about the future of the CWA program. He first attended a White House conference in company with Jesse Jones, Reconstruction Finance Corporation head, and later met the President at a meeting of the National Emergency Council.

Leaving the White House the second time, Hopkins stated that he intended to stick to his original plan, terminating CWA May 1, dropping 500,000 workers a week starting February 15.

This came on the heels of the disclosure that President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress today on emergency program, will ask only $350,000,000 for continuance of the CWA., an amount estimated by Hopkins to take his administration only to May 1. Hopkins asserted this was as far as he or the President was willing to go.

It was indicated, however, that should private industry, the increasing impetus of the Public Works program, or farm work fail to provide work for most of the 4,000,000 losing their CWA jobs, President Roosevelt might consider some measures to take care of them. Hopkins and the President are counting heavily on stimulated business and accelerated recovery to care for many workers.

Congressional action on CWA centered chiefly on a discussion of the graft charges revealed by Hopkins, with a demand voiced by Representative Gifford that Hopkins be called before the expenditures committee. Asserting that wealthy towns entirely out of debt are getting in on the CWA program, Gifford challenged Representative John J. Cochrane to call a meeting of his committee and ask Hopkins to appear for an accounting.

Snell Demands Meeting.

Representative Snell, Republican leader, joined the fray with a demand that the meeting be called, and was given assurance that a meeting will take place.

Reports were current in Congress that $2,000,000,000 might be asked to continue CWA, although no definite proposal appeared. The main

West Virginia CWA Workers Quit Jobs

Shake-up Demanded, With Quiz of Conditions.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Heralded as the forerunner of a State-wide strike, workmen of a number of CWA projects in Kanawha County quit work today.

When pickets were dispatched to other CWA and PWA projects State police were sent into the county to supervise picketing.

The strike was called following an additional cut of 10 per cent in workers ordered by Harry L. Hopkins, National administrator, in addition to a 15 per cent pay cut ordered recently.

C. F. Seagrist, speaking for his brother, Walter, president of the State Unemployed League, said: "We demand a complete new setup in the relief organization from Beehler on down. We also demand that men who have been released from CWA projects be put back to work, and we want a thorough investigation of working conditions.

The reference to Beehler was to William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator.

Father of 6 Killed; Son Held.

Gainesville, Tex., Jan. 23 (AP).—Claude Autry, 40, who is said to have threatened the lives of his wife and six children, was shot and killed today; and his 16-year-old son and the latter's 17-year-old uncle were arrested on murder charges.

CWA Chief Held as Job Racketeer

D. C. Official Collected "Fees" for Protection, Workers Charge.

Archer 'Fixed' So-Called Efficiency Ratings, Victims Reveal.

An immediate investigation to determine the extent of "racketeering" in local activities of the Civil Works Administration was promised yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen, after a CWA supervisor was reported by police to have been trapped in an alleged "pay-off" scheme, and held under bond of $1,500 on three counts of larceny by trick.

Complaints received at the office of James Ring, special investigator of the Senate Rent Investigating Committee, yesterday led police to a Chevy Chase rendezvous, where they arrested the CWA official. He was booked as Thomas Edgar Archer, 47, of 1631 Euclid street northwest.

Archer was employed as supervisor of CWA workers completing a survey of Washington rent conditions. He was assigned to Ring's office.

"Protecting" Their Jobs.

After numerous reports that Archer was involved in a reputed scheme to "protect" his workers by collecting a "small consideration" for the 'protection" of their jobs, Ring appealed to Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke.

Detective Sergts. A. D. and O. W. Mansfield were asigned to investigate Archer's activities. Plans were completed after a brief inquiry into his alleged "racket," and the detectives surprised him at an appointed meeting place with one of his workers.

The alleged scheme, as outlined to police, was described as follows:

One by one, Archer took several of his workers aside and explained that an efficiency expert was grading their work. For a small weekly "consideration," Archer is alleged to have pointed out, he could "fix it" so that their rating would be A No. 1, thus securing their positions and proving them able workers.

Will Prosecute to Limit.

"I can't conceive of anyone doing anything of that nature," Commissioner Allen declared, "but if it has happened, we want to know of it. We will prosecute to the limit. I can't believe anyone would do such a thing."

When complaints reached Ring's office, Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District CWA, ordered him to report to police. Local CWA projects come under the District Welfare Board, thus authorizing action by the Commissioners.

The two detectives learned that Jack D. Countryman, a CWA worker, of 2715 Wisconsin avenue northwest, was scheduled to meet Archer at an upper Connecticut avenue apartment house.

A children's playroom in the basement of the apartment has been used by workers on the rent survey as a conference room. It was there that Archer and Countryman met at noon yesterday.

Countryman, it was alleged, was to give his supervisor $5 to "fix" the efficiency expert's rating. While the policemen waited outside the building, Archer was paid the money in marked bills, it was reported.

The two Mansfields said they found the money on his person when they arrested him a few minutes later.

More than a half dozen other CWA employes testified they were approached by Archer. Thomas A. Donnelly, of 4415 Seventeenth street northwest, and John J. Roche, of 2116 P street northwest, were listed as complainants after police said they "fell" for his scheme.

Charged With Larceny.

It was at first planned to file extortion charges against the supervisor, but larceny counts were recommended by the district attorney's office until his status as a Government official is determined.

When the detectives returned to headquarters with their prisoner, they declared he attempted to slip a dollar bill in a side pocket of the police car.

Inspector Burke said that further investigation may lead to additional complaints against Archer.

Reported "rackets" and the advisability of action are expected to be discussed tonight before a meeting of the CWA work planning and job assigning committee.

Good From Depression? Sure—Gout Disappears

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—Gout, the disease that once was symbolic of a life of ease, has all but disappeared Dr. H. A. McGuigan, head of the department of pharmacy at the University of Illinois Medical College, said today.

"Depression," he said, " is a great gout killer. You can't work and support a case of gout at the same time."

MacDonald Decries Unstable Currencies

Awaits New Conference to Steady Monies, Cut Tariff Barriers.

Leeds, England, Jan. 23 (AP). Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald expressed impatience in a speech tonight with the failure of nations to stabilize currencies.

He declared stabilization is one of the first necessary measures to build up the "machinery of a co-operative world" and maintained the British government is watching for a chance to resume the world economic conferenc as soon as possible.

His address, given before 3,000 persons, was the first of a series of national government rallies.

Hecklers continually interrupted the speech and were particularly sarcastic concerning the premier's references to unemployment, especially acute in this district.

The white-haired prime-minister did not attempt to answer them directly but simply shouted them down with a megaphone.

Referring to stabilization, Mr. MacDonald said:

"I confess that I am impatient with the slowness of nations to stabilize currency.

"I am watching every opportunity that may enable us to get together again with the agenda prepared by world experts at Geneva and get governments to come to agreements which will remove unnecessary barriers and increase the stream of international trade."

Fight Renews On Full Police And Fire Pay

Senator Reynolds Will Seek Lifting of All Cuts in District.

Elimination of economy law restrictions on the District police and fire departments, regardless of what is done about Government employes generally, will be sought by Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, he announced yesterday.

Hopeful of getting all restrictive provisions eliminated, Senator Reynolds is confident he will be able at least to have restored to 20 days the annual leave allowed policemen and firemen. The economy law cut the leave down to 15 days.

The long hours of overtime required of policemen without extra salary or time off, together with the constant danger of injury and strain incident to the hazards of their jobs, were cited by Senator Reynolds as justifying return of the annual leave to pre-economy law limit.

Similar Fight Last Year.

A similar battle on behalf of the police and firemen was waged last year and had the support of several in addition to Senator Reynolds, including Senators Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York; M. M. Logan(Democrat), Kentucky; Gerald P. Nye (Republican), South Dakota; Hamilton F. Kean (Republican), New Jersey; Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona; Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, and W. Warren Barbour (Republican), New Jersey.

Statutory law provides an entrance salary of $1,900 for policemen, with automatic increases annually of $100 until salaries reach $2,400 at the end of five years. Privates passed over for promotions for two years must be dismissed. The economy law sets aside the annual increases and in addition imposes the 15 per cent cut given Government employes generally.

Exemption of the police department will be asked of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee in

Cuban Chaos Ends in U. S. Recognition

Welles Extends Greetings to Mendieta as Guns Roar Salute.

By Kendall Foss.

Terminating six months chaos, President Roosevelt yesterday extended formal recognition to the four-day-old Cuban government of Carlos Mendieta.

Acting on instructions from the White House, Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles ordered the U. S. Embassy in Havana to extend recognition shortly after 2 p. m. So sudden was the President's decision that it found Secretary Hull at luncheon. Welles, after telephoning his chief, dispatched the instructions himself.

Freeman Matthews, charge d'affaires, notified the Mendieta government for the United States since Jefferson Caffery, ambassador-designate is still serving as the President's personal representative in Cuba.

Caffery Credentials Ready.

Credentials are to be forwarded to Caffery at once, enabling him to formally take over the representation of the United States.

Monday, President Roosevelt had informed representatives of 18 Latin American countries he believed conditions in the island republic now warranted recognition. Consultation with sister states was untended as a demonstration of "neighborliness" and courtesy; it was not to be binding in reaching a decision. The step permitted other countries to extend recognition simultaneously if they so desired.

The wide support enjoyed by President Mendieta, which includes all major political factions as well as the army and navy, is the basis for recognition. It is believed warring factions, long engaged in

Riots Inside, Mob Without, Chamber Backs Chautemps

Paris, Jan. 23 (AP).—The French cabinet wrested a vote of confidence from a riotous Chamber of Deputies tonight while all available police battled with street mobs shouting "Stavisky cabinet resign!"

A vote of 386 for and 201 against was given Premier Camille Chautemps after a bitter struggle over opposition charges of official corruption in connection with the $40,000,000 collapse of the Bayonne pawnshop and the operations of its founder, the late Serge Stavisky.

The premier's own name, as well as those of Air Minister Cot, Minister of Justice Raynaldy, Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour, Finance Minister Bonnet, and Minister of Commerce Laurent-Eynac, were dragged into the debate, which Chautemps called "systematic exploitation of the scandal."

Republican mounted guards rode the sidewalks of Boulevard Saint Germain, repulsing the largest crowd of the three days of rioting, and preventing them from marching on the chamber building.

Mobs clashed repeatedly with heavy police reinforcements and the mounted guards and kept shouting, "The parliamentary regime is rotten!"

Thousands of spectators watched the surging demonstrators, whose protests were more violent than those of the two preceding days, when hundreds were arrested.

Potatoes and carrots were thrown from windows at the guardsmen and complicated the task of a small army of police, guardsmen and firemen in "mopping up."

Administration Plans to Eliminate Curbs on Revaluation.

Committee Makes 2 Major Changes

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Administration leaders in the Senate prepared last night to eliminate from the gold revaluation bill the restrictive amendments inserted into it by a combination of Democrats and Republicans on the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. The measure probably will be taken up today.

Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson indicated the Administration was opposed to the amendment placing jurisdiction over the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund in the hands of a five-man board instead of under the sole authority of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Senator Robinson was not so severe in his opposition to the amendments which limited to three years the powers to devalue the dollar and undertake stabilization of the dollar in foreign exchange. He explained he was "studying those amendments." But Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher, of the Banking and Currency Committee, said the Senate would be asked to remove the restrictions.

Although it is generally conceded that an overwhelming majority of the Senate will support whatever President Roosevelt wants in respect to this bill, there is a widespread sentiment for placing some time limitation on the operation of the stabilization fund and it is barely possible the Administration may withdraw its fight on those amendments.

No Substantial Changes.

The Democratic-Republican combination in the committee failed to make any substantial changes in the bill. Proposals to strike out the provisions for transfer of the Federal Reserve gold to the Treasury, increase the points at which devaluation could take place and similar amendments were rejected in committee.

Due to the general hostility which exists in this committee against monetary experimentation, Administration leaders were surprised that some of these other changes had not been adopted. They made no effort to argue the merits of the changes, adopting the strategy of getting the bill as quickly as possible to the Senate floor, where the Administration has ample support.

Adoption of this strategy was responsible for the speed with which the committee handled the bill. As fast as amendments were offered they were voted up or down. This took less than three hours. The bill was reported favorably by a vote of 15 to 2, with three committeemen not voting. Many of those voting for a favorable report, however, reserved the right to oppose the bill on the Senate floor.

Fess Attacks Bill.

Meanwhile, the bill was attacked in the Senate by Senators Simeon D. Fess (Republican), Ohio, and Henry D. Hatfield (Republican), West Virginia. Both contended the

Gasoline in Lamp Explodes; Five Die

Georgia Family Is Almost Wiped Out in Fire.

Canton, Ga., Jan. 23 (AP).—Explosion of gasoline being poured into an old-fashioned lamp in a farm-house 10 miles from Ball Ground, Ga., today had taken the lives of five persons.

The dead: Rufus Coleman, his wife and three children, Milton, 6; Julia, 9, and Elizabeth, 3. Two other children, a boy about 7, and a baby, 15 months old, escaped.

Jury Ordered To Forget Bias In Lynch Probe

42 Testify on East Shore After Judge Urges "Full Duty."

Princess Anne, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The Somerset County grand jury, which today heard 42 witnesses tell what they knew about the lynching of George Armwood, colored, here last October 18, was urged from the bench to forget bias in its findings of guilt or innocence.

In his charge to the grand jurors, Chief Judge John R. Pattison, sitting with his associates, Judge Robert F. Duer and Judge Joseph Bailey, told the talesman to discard sectional prejudice and comments by outsiders and to do their "full duty."

Immediately after three hours of hearing the lynch testimony the jury began on a petty larceny case. Whether any one will be indicted in the lynching case will not be known until all cases have been heard, probably Thursday.

Among the witnesses were Judge Duer, of the First Circuit bench; Sheriff Luther Daugherty, of this county; Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, of the State police, and a score of State and county officers.

The evidence given by the State policemen was believed to be the most important heard. Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., who was not here today despite the request for his aid made by State's Attorney John B. Robins, recently wrote Robins that he believed the State policemen's evidence would justify the indictment of nine men named by Lane as participants in the lynching, whose arrest was refused by Robins.

Guard Brought Climax.

The controversy between State and county officials reached its climax when Gov. Ritchie ordered National Guardsmen to the Eastern Shore to arrest the nine accused. After arresting four the Guardsmen were routed by a mob at Salisbury.

In his charge to the jurors, Judge Pattison said:

"It may be a feeling of indignation if not resentment has been aroused in you by what has been done and said by a part of the press of the State and by individuals in other sections of the State in derogation of the character and intelligence of the people of the lower shore, and in criticism and censure of the court of this circuit in the administration of the criminal law."

Mob Murder Condemned.

"But if this be so, you should not and must not allow such feeling to enter into the conclusions you are to reach in the cases of those charged with participation in the lynching. The fact that others may have wronged you and your people will not justify you in committing a further wrong by failing to do your full duty in strict accordance with the oath you have taken. In such a situation, greater is the need of determination on your part to do your duty well and properly, and this we believe you will do.

"Lynching should be condemned by all law-abiding people, and their failure to condemn it openly, or to speak of it in a way to lead those who participate in it to believe that it has their approval, is largely responsible for the commission of the offense.

"The substitution of mob rule for the orderly administration of the law is not only a backward step from civilization toward barbarism, but the exercise of that rule at times results in the punishment of the innocent or the punishment inflicted is greater than the offender might deserve."

resisted charges of the horsemen, threw torpedoes and paving blocks, and caused flurries of sparks by short-circuiting street car third rails.

Storekeepers, meanwhile, pulled down their iron shutters, while cafe owners in the vicinity hastily took in chairs and tables from the sidewalk restaurants.

On a pledge given January 12 to clean up the Bayonne fiasco the government was given two expressions of confidence, 360 to 229 and 376 to 205.

Today's balloting followed a warning by Deputy Philippe Henriot on the floor of the chamber that Chautemps and several ministers should prepare themselves against charges to be made in documents regarding the Stavisky case.

Chamber Demonstration.

The nature of these papers was not revealed. With shouts and desk thumpings supporters of the government drowned out Henriot, and for more than half an hour shouted epithets, shook their fists, and yelled as Henriot challenged Chautemps' career in Parliament and law.

So wild did the demonstration become that Vice President Delbos suspended the session. Communists sang the Internationale, while the public in the gallery joined in.

Chautemps came to the defense of Paul-Boncour and said the foreign minister acted "quite naturally" when he was the attorney for Mme. Stavisky, who was arrested in 1926 for robbery.

A charge by Henriot that Paul-Boncour and Anatole De Monzie, minister of education, were Mme. Stavisky's lawyers almost led to a duel last week between De Monzie and the deputy.

Reed Linked in Futile Deal For Ocean Mail Contract

We were out on a line," said Ball.

Although Brown at first had demurred at pushing through the contract award so close to the time he left office, said Ball, the Postoffice head said he would if Atterbury and Ball really wanted it, which they did.

Questions Irk Atterbury.

Ball said as far as he knew the contract request was still resting upon the desk of Postmaster General Farley.

Brown further requested the railroad officials to keep his correspondence with them confidential, testified Ball.

Atterbury, very calm except when his irritation at the questioning overcame him, was grilled at length about the relation of his line with the Hudson-Manhattan company, of which Brown has been chairman since he left the Postoffice.

The railroad president insisted that operating contracts were the only connection the two companies have, despite the series of questions by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, committee chairman.

Praises Brown's Judgement.

Questioned about Brown's connection with the Hudson-Manhattan, Atterbury said he knew nothing of the appointment until he read of it in the newspapers, adding:

"I said t omyself, what a fortunate selection that was. They couldn't have gotten a better executive."

When Black asked him about Brown's reported anxiety to be helpful in the matter of the steamship contract award, Atterbury further commended the former Cabinet official, saying:

"That was according to Mr. Brown's usual custom of being perfectly frank, straightforward, and outspoken."

Regarding the award of an air mail contract to the Transcontinental and Western Air Mail Line, after Brown had proposed the merger of two lines, Atterbury said he made frequent trips to Washington to talk to Government officials.

Can't Recall Seeing Hoover.

He said he "probably" came to the White House in conection with the award, but that he couldn't remember specifically talking to President Hoover about it.

Reverting to previous testimony that Brown and his assistant in the Postoffice Department, W. Irving Glover, had ordered records from their offices burned, Senator Black had the witnesses identify various letters as those they had written and mailed to the postoffice officials.

One addressed by Ball to Glover was marked "personal," but Ball admitted it dealt entirely with the proposed mail contract and "referred to official business."

After bringing out that the Transcontinental Air Transport had been organized with a $500,000 investment by the Pennsylvania Railroad, and that its merger with the Western Air Express resulted in division of 47½ per cent of stock to T. A. T., 47½ per cent to Western Air, and 5 per cent to Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, controlled by the Mellon interests, Black pointed out:

"Then the T. A. T. and P. A. I. C. between them controlled 52½ per cent of the stock of the new line which got the mail contract." Atterbury agreed.

Pilot Defends Industry.

W. A. Dawson, pilot for Eastern Air Transport, presented the committee with a petition, signed by employes of lines holding mail contracts, asking the committee take cognizance that the whole industry is "being discredited for the mistakes of a few," and that present airline operators should be separated from those who operated during the "promotional period of air-mail lines."

Called to the stand, Dawson was questioned about the General Motors and Eastern Air officials, with whom he conferred the day before the petition was presented. Although he saw several officials, he said, he did not discuss the petition with them until after it had been written and signed.

The hearing adjourned until Thursday.

Merchandising Is Held Needed

Gas Companies Assert Item Essential in Capital Costs.

Testimony on merchandising and jobbing was introduced yesterday before the Public Utilities Commission in its hearings on valuations of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Companies, to be used as a basis for rate-fixing.

Under questioning by John C. Bruton, jr., assistant counsel for the gas companies, Henry M. Brundage, general sales manager of the Washington company, testified the sales efforts are concentrated on four major groups of appliances.

These items, he said, are cooking, water heating, house heating and refrigeration. The companies have inrtoduced testimony purporting to show merchandising must be included in working capital for their valuation total. Justification for inclusion of this item, they contend, is that merchandising activity contributes to efficient service.

William A. Robert, counsel for the commission, contends there should be no inclusion of a merchandising item.

White House Rule On Liquor Delayed

Mrs. Roosevelt Waits for It to Be Legal.

The question of whether wines and liquor will be served at the White House must remain unanswered until after they become legal in the District of Columbia, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday.

Asked about the White House liquor policy, Mrs. Roosevelt left a press conference to telephone the President.

After the conversation, Mrs. Roosevelt said the President had told her he expected to sign the District liquor bill before Monday and that an announcement as to whether the White House will be wet or dry could be expected then.

Gold Valuation Bill Limitation Faces Defeat

Administration Believed Strong Enough to Beat Changes.

measure was destructive of the "very fundamentals" of the American system. Senator Fess, a former college president, struck out at the Roosevelt brain trust, referring to that group as "fugitive professors."

He assailed the devaluation scheme as "dishonest." When Senator Robinson contended the Ohioan was arguing that once a monetary system was established it should never be changed, Senator Fess denied the contention, but said that when devalued dollars were used to pay the Governments' debts it amounted to "repudiation" by the use of "fiat money."

Senator Hatfield contended that the President was "trying to lift the face of nature" through his monetary policy.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, sponsored two of the three important amendments adopted—one to place the stablization fund in the hands of a board of five and to place a time limit on the operations of the fund.

Senator Robert Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, was author of an amendment to make the time limitation apply to the period in which the President might change the gold content of the dollar.

Object to Committee Plan.

The change in the management of the stabilization fund would place it under the control of a board consisting of the Secretary of the Treasury, the governor of the Federal Reserve Board, the Comptroller of the Currency and two persons to be named by the President. The chief merit of the change, it was argued, would be to bring about some form of coordination between the Treasury and the Reserve System.

Senator Robinson, however, said he did not believe the stabilization fund could function propertly under the direction of five men. This view is also held by the Administration's monetary advisers, it is understood.

The second Glass amendment would qualify the entire section 10, which provides for the stabilization fund. It was as follows:

"All of the powers conferred by this section shall expire two years after the enactment of this act unless the President shall sooner declare the emergency ended and operation of the stabilization board terminated, but the President may extend the same for not more than one additional year by proclamation recognizing the continuance of the existing emergency."

Vote on Amendment.

The two amendments were adopted by identical votes of 12 to 8. Democrats voting for the amendments were Senators Glass, Bulkley, Gore (Oklahoma), McAdoo (California) and Adams (Colorado). Republicans supporting the amendments were Goldsborough (Maryland), Townsend (Delaware), Walcott (Connecticut), Carey (Wyoming), Couzens (Michigan), Steiwer (Oregon) and Kean (New Jersey).

The opposing votes came from: Democrats—Wagner (New York), Barkley (Kentucky), Costigan (Colorado), Reynolds (North Carolina), Byrnes (South Carolina), Bankhead (Alabama) and Fletcher (Florida); Republicans—Norbeck (South Dakota). Senator Norbeck, ill at the Mayo Hospital, sent his proxy to Senator Fletcher, instructing him to use it to uphold everything the President wished.

The Bulkley amendment, similar in text to the second Glass amendment, but applicable to that section authorizing the President to revalue the dollar between 50 and 60 per cent of its present gold value, was adopted, 11 to 8. The roll call was similar, except that Senator Couzens was not recorded.

Senator McAdoo moved for revision of the bill to permit the Federal Reserve Banks to keep their gold, paying over to the Government the profit resulting from devaluation by means of an excise tax. It was rejected, 11 to 9, Senators Adams, Bulkley and Couzens deserting the rebellious coalition.

Reject 60-70 Valuation.

A proposal by Senator Kean that to make the devaluation limits 65 to 70 per cent was rejected, viva voce. So was an amendment by Senator Gore to make the Government trustee of the Reserve System gold, but leaving its possession in the latter.

Senator Fletcher proposed to strike out the House amendment providing for a report to Congress on the operations of the stabilization fund at the end of three years. This was carried, viva voce, leaving the original language in the bill which required an annual audit of the fund, with a report to the President.

Senator Fletcher later said "secrecy was the essence of a stabilization fund," and that Congress could get a report at any time a majority wished it.

Only Senators Goldsborough and Townsend voted against a favorable report. Senator Gore voted "present." Senators Carey and Couzens left the room before this final vote was taken. In addition to 11 Democrats — Glass, Wagner, Barkley, Bulkley, Costigan, Reynolds, Byrnes, Bankhead, McAdoo, Adams and Fletcher— four Republicans—Norbeck, Walcott, Steiwer and Kean—voted for a favorable report.

Reed Answers Charge.

Philadelphia, Jan. 23 (AP).—U. S. Senator David A. Reed said today his action in the Senate in connection with the Philadelphia Mail Steamship Co. contract last March was motivated by a desire to advance the interests of the port of Philadelphia.

The Senator, here for a speech tonight, said he had no recollection of hearing of the matter until after bids were in and after the decision had been made by the Postoffice Department to give a contract to the Philadelphia concern.

He said, "When the contract was about to be signed some Southern interests who had been unsuccessful bidders tried to break up the arrangement by means of a Senatorial resolution demanding the postponement of the award.

"Naturally I wanted to see a new line of steamships operating out of Philadelphia and it seemed only honest to give the award to the Philadelphia concern, which was the low bidder.

"I tried without success to stop the passage of Senator Black's resolution. Finally the resolution was passed and Philadelphia lost the business."

"Life" for Kidnaping In Massachusetts Law

Boston, Jan. 23 (AP).—Gov. Ely late today signed a bill which provides a penalty of imprisonment for any term of years or life for kidnaping with intent to extort.

Under the previous statute 25 years' imprisonment was the maximum sentence but the new law gives the courts the right to impose any sentence up to life.

Former Ohio Editor Dies.

eign trade to Britain, he said a series of bilateral treaties were being negotiated.

"We are not content with these mutual exchanges," he asserted. "But must work for comprehensive international agreements which will move from all nations the barriers to international trade.

"How much better it would have been if nations gathered in London last summer had conferred with one another without the view of heightening tariffs.

"There was a field for negotiation in which the mutual interests of nations in the exchange of trade could be jointly improved and the blessing of trade spread everywhere."

When he started to discuss the British foreign policy, hecklers shouted, "stay to home!" A chorus of "amens" followed his declaration that the government stands by the League of Nations.

Tree Surgery Work Delayed

Dupont Circle Bids Held Up Pending Wage Settlement.

The trees of Dupont Circle must wait a while longer before they can talk about their operations.

Just as bids were to be opened yesterday on necessary tree surgery at the circle, C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, ordered them held up until the tree doctors iron out wage differences.

The controversy is before the Board of Labor Review. Tree surgeons, it was said, want to have their vocation reclassified so they will get a higher and standardized wage. Those on the regular pay roll of the parks office, but who will not be used on the Dupon Circle project, receive 80 cents an hour.

Finnan said the bids were held up in fairness to the workmen involved and to the contractors.

The Dupone Circle contract will be the first awarded by the parks office under the $50,000 public works allotment for tree surgery. It is estimated to cost about $3,000.

DepartmentalBank Poys 4th Dividend

Depositors to Get $40,000 Starting Today.

Payment of $40,000 representing a fourth dividend of 5 per cent to depositors of the closed Departmental Bank will be begun today by W. B. Allman, receiver.

For convenience of depositors, the bank will be open until 9 tonight and through Saturday. Under the receivership, the bank, a savings institution, has paid depositors 65 per cent, or $505,000, since suspension July 14, 1932.

Meanwhile, officials of the Franklin National Bank issued a call to stockholders for subscriptions of $100,000 stock necessary for it to reopen as part of the new Mechanics-Franklin Bank. Depositors will be asked for subscriptions later.

Home Calls, So Boy Leaves His School

Edward Hutchin, Jr., 9, on Way Here by Road.

Stricken with an attack of homesickness after his mother had visited him at his boarding house in Purcellville, Va., last Sunday, to celebrate his ninth birthday, Edward Hutchins, jr., was reported on his way to Washington via the thumb route last night.

Mrs. Edward C. Hutchins, his mother, notified Virginia and District police to be on the lookout for the young runaway.

When he left Purcellville he was wearing a dark gray sweater and knickers, black shoes and no cap or hat. He has dark eyes, dark brown hair, weighs about 70 pounds and is 4 feet 7 inches tall.

McCormick Buys Seats To Hear Ganna Walska

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—Ganna Walska, concert singer and divorced wife of Harold F. McCormick, returned to this city today for the first time in five years and laughingly admitted hoping to see her millionaire former husband.

Told that McCormick had tickets for her concert here tomorrow, she smiled and said: "That is very like him."

Snow-Bound Villages Reported Destitute

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 23 (AP).—Several settlements in northern Victoria County, isolated by a driving snowstorm, were reported today to be "almost destitute."

Barriers of snow and ice cut off supplies by land and sea. Coastal ships have not been able to enter Victoria ports for weeks and merchants are without stocks.

charge of the independent offices appropriations bill by the Policemen's Association, Private Edgar S. Walker, president. So far the subcommittee, of which Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, is chairman, has not fixed a time to hear representatives of the policemen.

Would Lift Promotion Ban.

The President has recommended removal of the restrictions against automatic promotions imposed against personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Public Health Service. The committee is to hear representatives of the services on this question at executive sessions tomorrow morning.

Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, chief of finance of the Army, and Rear Admiral Claude C. Bloch, of the Office of the Secretary of the Navy, are to represent the Army and Navy.

Pleas of veterans for greater relief than the $21,000,000 given in the recent order by the President also are to be heard by the committee. Those to speak for the veterans include Senator David A. Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, who has introduced an amendment embodying the American Legion's so-called four-point relief program.

Others who are listed to appear include Edward A. Hayes, National commander of the American Legion; Thomas Kirby, of the Disabled American Veterans, and Rice W. Means, of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Twice Postponed.

The committee has twice postponed meetings this week, while Administration leaders sought a basis of agreement with advocates of pay restoration.

Administration leaders have offered an immediate restoration of 5 per cent, with a broader base for determining future restorations. Other proposals under consideration include immediate restoration of the 15 per cent on salaries up to $1,800 or $2,000, partial restoration of those from $2,000 to $4,000, and return of all salaries to normal after July 1.

Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, member of the subcommittee, reiterated yesterday that he was an "irreconcilable" on the question.

"I am for full restoration of pay and greater payments to veterans immediately and I am not going to change," Senator McCarran said.

Yield as Little as Possible.

Administration leaders are trying to yield as little as they have to. They don't want the situation to get out of hand. They are preparing to invoke Presidential influence to stop the pay and veterans' payments movement, although it has been said at the White House the President would not veto a pay-increase measure if Congress enacted it.

The first definite test will come in the subcommittee in charge of the independent offices bill. Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, is to take an active hand in the fight. He will act as the lieutenant of Senator Glass, whose physical endurance has been lessened by poor health.

U. S. Court Halts Sale of Property

Wall Realty Is Withdrawn at Charles Town.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Property of C. F. Wall has been withdrawn from the public sale to be held here next Friday, by a restraining order of the United States District Court, the sheriff's office has been notified.

Sale of the property was ordered by the Jefferson County Circuit Court last October. Action of the United States Court at Elkins, W. Va., followed a bankruptcy plea by Wall.

The property includes Altona Farm, one mile west of Charles Town; the Ballenger and McCauley houses, both in Charles Town; Shadyside Farm, 4½ miles northwest of here; the Williamson Farm, of Berkley County, and various lots here and in Ranson, W. Va.

Capital Driver Fined; Grazed Funeral Auto

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Gardner H. Knode, of Washington, was fined $1 and costs by Magistrate Richard Sweeney for sidewiping a funeral car here. Knode explained he did not know it was a funeral.

The magistrate said some provision should be made at intersections to show a funeral is passing. Funerals have the right of way.

Jobless to Clear Brush by Highway

Fire Hazard Is Less in Cumberland Area.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23. (Spl.). Under direction or the State Forestry department, clearing of Braddock road from the Digle to Alleghany Grove on the National Highway began today. A crew recruited from transient labor is being used. Thte German method of thinning out undergrowth along both sides the road will be followed to prevent fire from cigarette or cigar stubs thrown from the vehicle.

The work will enable transients fed by the Federal transient agency to earn lodging. Other main roads in the county will be brushed in this manner.

District Forester H. C. Buckingham states that from Grantsville to New Germany in Garrett County, in recent months, CCC have been improving the road and extending the visibility on curves.

Leases for the Cumberland airport site have been executed, according to the city officials, and an application for the Federal appropriation is expected to be approved within a few days.

Mrs. Powell Dead At Fredericksburg

Funeral to Be Held Today in Family Cemetery.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Mrs. Caroline Elizabeth Powell, 76, died yesterday of heart trouble at her home here. A native of Stafford County, Mrs. Powell was the widow of James L. Powell, who died in 1914.

She is survived by five sons, S. P. and M. J. Powell, of Fredericksburg; Prof. W. P. Powell, of Sheridan, Ark., and Fredericksburg; John G. Powell, of Denver, Colo., and James L. Powell, of Muskogee, Okla., and two daughters, Mrs. Orene P. Hermann, of Martinsville, Va., and Mrs. Julia Haigh, of Washington.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. Robert F. Cavetlee, of the Fredericksburg Baptist Church, tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the grave in the family burial ground near Belmont.

Baltimore Counts Surplus of Million

Gains Over $2,000,000 Deficit Last Year.

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP).—Baltimore entered 1934 with a budget surplus of nearly a million dollars, an increase of more than three millions over the condition of the city coffers a year ago.

A statement given Mayor Howard W. Jackson by Herbert Fallin, director of the budget, today showed the surplus at the close of 1933 was $974,583.34, as compared with a deficit in 1932 of $2,374,500.

The statement, which covered levy appropriations, revenue accounts and expenditures for 1933, also showed a cash balance of $2,381,331.43, principally on loan funds and general levy funds.

Ban on Lobbies Urged in Senate Few Quit Posts

By Raymond Clapper.

An effort may be made in Congress to bring lobbying in general under Government supervision as an outgrowth of President Roosevelt's clean-up campaign, directed at backdoor influence in Washington.

Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, has disclosed that he is thinking of proposing legislation which would compel all lobbyists appearing before Government departments to register, and to file as a matter of public record copies of contracts with their clients setting forth fees or other compensation agreed upon.

There was a gleam in the veteran Senator's eye when he suggested this halter for Washington's greatest industry. He has been agitating for control of lobbying ever since he led the fight to rebuke former Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, for engaging a representative of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association as secretary for his subcommittee, which was considering revision of textile tariff schedules. Now, under the impetus of the White House campaign against political lobbying, Senator Norris is ready to press the fight still further.

Skeptical of Enthusiasm.

There was some doubt, however, as to how enthusiastically other Senators and Representatives would be, since a great number of them have the thought that if they are retired to private life they may want to take up lobbying here, as so many of their ill-fated predecessors have done before. The Washington telephone classified directory's list of lawyers reads like a roster of the Congressional Directory of a few years ago.

In fact, predictions are freely heard around Congress that much of the present talk about cracking down on the backdoor brigade will die out shortly and that the old familiar faces will soon be back doing business as usual. Almost every Administration has seen a drive on lobbying and usually a Senate investigation of it, all with no net results.

Norris Pushes Registration Proposal.

Nevertheless Chairman King of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee said he expected to have a meeting today if possible to consider anti-lobbying measures which have been recently introduced. Senator Norris, a member of this subcommittee, expects to suggest his registration proposal as an amendment to the Vandenberg bill, which would prevent national committeemen from holding office under the Treasury Department or attempting to influence any Government official.

Another proposal popped up in the House in the form of a joint resolution by Representative Charles V. Truax (Democrat), Ohio, to forbid any one connected with a national political committee from holding Federal office.

His resolution read as follows: "Resolved: That no officer, member, or employe of a national committee or any political party shall be eligible to hold any Government position directly or indirectly under the jurisdiction of any department, bureau, board, commission or independent agency of the Government."

No Resignations So Far.

This is in line with the policy outlined earlier this week in an authoritative quarter. Thus far, however, the official hints have brought no resignations from Federal office holders on the National Democratic Committee other than Frank C. Walker, executive director of the National Economic Council, which was sent in some time ago. Postmaster General James A. Farley had not heard from any members of the National Committee up to the time he left for New York last night to attend the funeral of John H. McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic leader.

Dudley Doolittle, Kansas National committeeman and general agent of the Farm Credit Administration in Kansas, in response to a telegraphic inquiry from The Post said he had not been advised of any desire for his resignation from the committee.

"Under no circumstances would I permit myself either as National committeeman or as general agent of the Farm Credit Administration to embarrass the President or any part of the Administration. I have been Democratic National committeeman for Kansas for nine years. I have been general agent for two weeks upon invitation of the Farm Credit Administration. I will resign both positions or either if the President wants it and continue in an unofficial capacity to help in the great work of restoration which is now evident everywhere, but until I am more definitely advised of the President's desires I shall assume that there has been no change in his attitude as far as my situation is concerned."

Committeemen Still in Office.

Further checkup of the committee membership revealed at least 12 members holding Federal appointments, and therefore due for resignation from one post or the other. The list of these committeemen includes: Archibald McNeil, of Connecticut, State chairman for PWA; Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, of Connecticut, collector of the port at New Haven; Dudley Doolittle, of Kansas, general agent for Farm Credit Administration in Kansas; Horatio Abbott, of Michigan, collector of internal revenue at Detroit; Joseph Wolf, of Minnesota, collector of internal revenue at St. Paul; Mrs. Stanley V. Hodge, of Minnesota, collector of customs at St. Paul; W. T. Kemper, of Missouri, agent for RFC; H. L. Perry, of North Dakota, collector of internal revenue at Fargo; Miss Nellie Dougherty, of North Dakota, postmistress at Minot; W. A. Julian, of Ohio, treasurer of the United States; W. W. Howes, of South Dakota, First Assistant Postmaster General; Jed C. Adams, of Texas, member Board of Tax Appeals.

Thousands of Pupils, Cut Off From Library, Must Take Their Reading in Basket Handouts

Books Sent D. C. Schools in Charity Style to Supply Demand.

(This is the third of a series of eight articles on Washington libraries.)

By Felix Bruner.

In an aisle in the crowded stock room of the Central Public Library are piled a score of laundry baskets. In these baskets books are sent to the various schools. Teachers make up lists of desired or required reading for their classes, a basket is made up—much as baskets of food are made up at Christmas time—and sent to the needy class.

This form of library basket service is necessary because more than half the school children of Washington do not have access to a Public Library branch. Only by walking miles or making a trip by street car or bus can they obtain the services of a lending library. As far as is possible, the library is brought to them.

But a basket of books bears about as much relation to the requirements of Washington's elementary and high school pupils as a basket of food to a steady job and income. The "charity" system of supplying books has been made necessary because Congress has not seen fit to supply Washington with the same library facilities as are considered necessary in other cities.

School Work Suffers.

Courses of study, especially in the upper grades of the public schools, are formed with the idea that pupils will do a certain amount of outside reading in connection with their school work, and that a certain amount of reference books are available to pupils. In many Washington schools courses have been changed and curtailed because these facilities are not available.

However, on the "Christmas basket" basis a total of 478,315 volumes were distributed to the schools last year. This was an increase of 24,075 over the previous year. Books were sent to every white elementary school, to every junior high school, to 51 colored schools in the public school system, as well as to 20 Catholic and 10 private schools. In all, 1,062 classrooms in 181 buildings had collections of books from the schools division.

It is doubtful whether many Washington people appreciate the broad service given them by their public library. For instance, the library publishes a regular bulletin listing what it terms the informal educational opportunities in Washington. For instance, this bulletin lists meetings and lectures of an educational nature of which the public can take advantage.

Courses of Study Listed.

The bulletin for January contains four large, closely typed pages, listing lectures and meetings of an educational nature, courses of study by the Americanization School, the Art League, the Community Center, the Esperanto Association and the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. It lists various art exhibitions and concerts. In addition, it gives information not only about the Public Library, but about other Washington libraries.

At Christmas time, the library published a list of books that library officials believed would be welcome Christmas presents, and told how to find them. The purpose of the library is not only to lend books, but to encourage reading generally.

One interesting publication of the library is entitled "Be Ready for Your Next Opportunity." In it are listed hundreds of books on the various trades and crafts, books from which the reader can learn more about his job and about the job of the other fellow.

Cheer for Despondent.

Perhaps as unusual as any of the library's many publications is a group of mimeographed sheets entitled "Those Who Overcame." This is a mine of cheer for the despondent and the discouraged. It lists books about persons who overcame handicaps and achieved happiness and success in spite of their difficulties.

It also lists books telling how physical defects, poverty and other obstacles have been overcome. It is really a catalogue of inspirational literature, intended to give new impetus and encouragement to readers who are "down on their luck."

Another catalogue lists books about the World War and its aftermath. Still another tells of books about Washington. In this connection, the library has a remarkable collection of Washington material. In the Washingtoniana room are hundreds of books and pamphlets, maps and newspaper clippings, all bearing on the city. It is perhaps the greatest collection of information about the Nation's Capital in existence. The collection has been put together under the direction of Librarian George F. Bowerman. It is intended for public use.

Wide Service Available.

There has been listed here only a few of the library's publications. Among the most important are catalogues of books to be used as collateral reading in the schools, graded according to the school classes.

These are described here to give some impression of the wide service the library offers the people of Washington. These services are available in spite of the library's limited funds and its extremely limited equipment.

With more buildings, more books and better equipment, the library could multiply its service to the people and could take its place with public libraries in the other cities.

Printer in Hagerstown For 62 Years Retires

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). William D. South, 78, believed one of the oldest printers in point of service in Maryland, has retired after continuous service on Hagerstown newspapers for 62 years.

He began at 16 to learn his trade on the Maryland Free Press, Hagerstown.

House Group Passes Slum Clearance Bill

for the housing plans, Mrs. Roosevelt said, is in the fact that definite options have been taken on other lands in the District on which model low-cost houses could be erected. She said the alley bill would be pushed in the House.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the Park and Planning Commission, revealed at the hearing that an amendment had already been sent to the Budget Bureau to remove the objection to the bill raised recently. This amendment would authorize the President to expend the $500,000 Housing Corporation fund, as provided in the bill, or any other available fund.

PWA Funds Sought.

The Budget Bureau in a letter to the District Commissioners had pointed out that steps had already been taken to obtain funds from the Public Works Administration for the alley clearance project. It is presumed that the PWA fund could be substituted for the Housing Corporation fund if the former is granted.

Settle revealed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would also be asked to lend $1,000,000 for the project if the bill becomes a law.

He told the subcommittee that this is an opportune time to launch the work, as it will provide employment and because building materials are still comparatively cheap.

Social Agencies Would Help.

Florence Stewart, secretary of the housing survey committee of the Council of Social Agencies, pledged the cooperation of the city's charitable organizations in supervising the occupancy of new dwellings by the alley residents.

She recalled a survey conducted two years ago and stated that sufficient suitable housing could be found in close proximity to many of the alleys to permit removal of the alley residents immediately after a fund is obtained.

A division of opinion was apparent with regard to the old-age pension bill. Several of the witnesses who testified favored the Black bill in preference to the Norton bill, but Representative Black indicated last night that he would not oppose the subcommittee's decision in favor of the latter as both bills sought to accomplish the same general purpose.

$9 a Week at 60.

The Norton bill would grant a pension to District residents of ten years' standing who are 60 or older. The income of the pensioner from all sources would not exceed $468 a year, or about $9 a week.

The Black bill requires that the indigent be 68 years old and that the amount of pension be left to the discretion of the Board of Public Welfare, Administration of the pension fund under the Norton bill would be left to a commission to be named by the District Commissioners.

Among those who indorsed the Norton bill at the hearing were W. C. Hushing, representing the American Federation of Labor, and E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes. Those who spoke for the Black bill were Mrs. Richard Hogue, secretary of the citizens committee, and James J. Duhamel, of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

Mendieta Rule Wins for Cuba U. S. Avowal

New Deal in Sugar and Tariff Is Promised to Island Republic.

jockeying for an advantage, have decided to compose their differences, if that is the way to American recognition. Only the left radicals have refused to join the coalition, believing, it appears, that the new government marks the collapse of the revolution.

To justify recognition, the Mendieta government must, according to international usage, demonstrate its ability to maintain law and order, show that active opposition has ceased, and display the willingness and ability to meet the country's foreign obligations.

"New Deal" Expected.

In this case, it is doubted the ability to meet obligations exists. This will not be held against Cuba, however, for it has been clearly foreshadowed that a new deal, both in respect to sugar and in the matter of debt reduction and consolidation, is scheduled.

Following recognition, which was signalized by the exchange of 21-gun salutes between Cabana fortress and United States warships in Havana Harbor, Marques Sterling will become Cuban Ambassador in Washington. Sterling was secretary of state in the Grau government and unofficial envoy to the United States.

Abrogation of the Platt amendment, governing Cuban-American relations, and a new deal for Cuban sugar (the country's chief economic prop) are already under discussion in official circles here. Action is expected soon, for it is understood that without some tangible aid in solving the economic tangle in Cuba, neither the Mendieta nor any other government can withstand. The Platt amendment requires Senatorial approval before it can be modified, as does any proposed commercial treaty.

Hull Is Gratified.

In discussing Cuban recognition, Secretary Hull said:

"I am immensely gratified that the recognition of Cuba comes at this time. I say this because I am a loyal friend and well-wisher of the Cuban people, and because Cuban recognition coming now is a sort of culmination of the proceedings of the recent Montevideo Conference.

"The almost universal support by the people of Cuba points strongly to the maintenance of a stable government and the continuance of law and order in that country.

"It is the devout wish of the friends of the Cuban people that all forces of law and order in the island will continue to unify themselves in support of the new government which has just been installed."

Hopkins Holds To Eliminating CWA by May 1

Part of the show took place in the office of Secretary Ickes, PWA administrator. Ickes revealed, in the wake of the graft disclosures made by Hopkins that President Roosevelt had given him blanket authority to take any necessary measures against graft in his organization.

"Hopkins had a hard job," Ickes declared. "He had to set up his administration almost overnight, and trouble was bound to creep in. We had time to establish safeguards, and so far we have found very little grafting."

The safeguards, Ickes explained, consist mostly of the inspection service established, a service which he revealed yesterday will go so far as to provide against possibility of unscrupulous contractors making workers "kick back" part of their pay. Inspectors will be provided, he said, so that any worker feeling that posted pay schedules show he is not receiving correct wages, may complain without fear of losing his job.

Ickes Expects Trouble.

Ickes warned, however, that he expects graft troubles to show up in the construction stage of projects.

"Our main troubles are to come," he said. "They will consist of skimping and beating on the hundreds of contracts which will go into effect. Our inspection, however, ought to keep this under control."

While troubles raged about the jobs program, protests against stopping the undertaking continued to pour in. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor visited the White House, where he was assured by the President that CWA would not be cut off now. "Everything will work out all right," Green asserted, as he left.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department started work on graft cases outlined to Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan by Hopkins. Keenan confined his activities to a brief comment that Hopkins had referred to his department "several complaints" of local grafting, with a request that prosecution be initiated where Federal statutes had been violated. Instances o firregularities have been reported unofficially in several States, notably Pennsylvania, where an administrator was discharged, California, Indiana and other places.

Meanwhile the CWA program went forward on the reduced hour basis, with 13 States dropping 180,000 workers to bring pay rolls down to original quotas. The protests this occasioned centered on the contention that the program had been a life saver to small business men and to towns and communities that had been without jobs for months. The reduction orders, coupled with graft charges, drew from members of the South Carolina House delegation a request to Hopkins to investigate CWA in that State.

It became increasingly apparent yesterday that business recovery and the stimulus of PWA contracts is being counted upon to provide work for the CWA workers after May 1. President Green of the labor federation asserted that PWA ought to provide for as many as 1,500,000, and private industry almost as many. In addition, Hopkins has counted from the first on farm work helping out.

'Floaters' Soon To Earn Keep Building Road

Fort Frederick Project for Transient Relief Set This Week.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Transients being cared for at the transient bureau recently established at the Salvation Army here, will begin earning their keep this week. Fifty of them will be put to work building a road to Fort Frederick, famous French and Indian War fortress in western Washington County. The State Roads Commission will supervise construction of three-quarters of a mile of roadway from a concrete highway leading from the National highway, past the fort, which is the property of the Maryland State Forestry Department.

Until a transient camp is located near Hancock, the workers will be transported by truck daily to and from their work. The Hancock camp, one of four to be established in Maryland, will accommodate 200 men. These camps will be located close to continuous work projects carried on through cooperation of the Forestry Department.

Transients will be employed 27 hours weekly and will receive the pay for three hours at 30 cents an hour for spending money. They will work 24 hours each week to pay for food and lodging.

The projects will consist of forestry work, including elimination of fire hazards on private lands.

Bureaus opened in Baltimore, Cumberland, Frederick, Hagerstown and Brunswick are seeking to establish the legal residence of transients if possible and to send them back to their homes.

Record For Travelers Aid.

Danville, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). More transients sought help from the Travelers' Aid Society during 1933 than ever before, Mrs. Villa Drew, representative of the society, said. Young women constituted the largest group among 1,937 who sought help. In most instances travelers had run out of funds and needed money.

Cumberland Area Home Loans Gain

$256,418 Total Granted, 2 Million Asked.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Application for loans from home owners in Cumberland and nearby sections total $2,125,597.35, it was announced yesterday by Oliver H. Bruce, jr., manager of the Cumberland branch of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. A total of 906 applications have been filed.

Loans paid out aggregate $256,418.47, with $14,229.24 paid in cash for taxes, water rents and paving liens.

Bonds have been accepted, mostly by mortgages in this city, in the amount of $241,000. Edward J. Smith has been added to the Frederick County staff as title attorney. Matthew J. Mullaney, of Cumberland, has been appointed to a similar position at the local office. The Cumberland area includes Allegany, Garrett, Washington and Frederick Counties.

Crimes of Phantom "Gasser" Spur Assembly to Tighten Law

Sinister, Nocturnal Attacks Prompt Bill Carrying Heavy Penalties.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—The mysterious and sinister attacks of a night marauder, whose release of nauseating gas has terrorized residents of Botetourt County, today received the attention of the Virginia General Assembly in the form of a bill to make such attacks punishable with heavy penitentiary sentences.

Under the bill malice would be presumed in the release of noxious gases in private homes or public gathering places and the guilty person would be punished by a prison sentence of 1 to 10 years or, in the discretion of the court, by a fine of $500 or 12 months in jail, or both.

Should any person, animal or bird be physically injured by the gas the guilty person would be deemed guilty of malicious wounding and confined from 1 to 20 years.

Police Tear Gas Exempt.

Nothing in the bill would prevent the use of tear gas by police.

The measure was introduced by Delegates Scott, Fishburn and Morgan and was prompted by the Botetourt County attacks. Three such attacks occurred last night.

The Botetourt "gasser" last night was seen for the first time, being fired on as he fled from the vicinity of the home of Raymond Etter.

"Gasser" Strikes Thrice.

Fincastle, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—Thrice again the sulking "gas man" has struck and fled.

In three forays last night the "gas man"—so called because he has attacked nearly a score of homes in this region with gas during the last month—came near to capture. It was the first time he has been seen.

All the homes gassed last night are in Carvin's Cove, near here. One was that of Raymond Etter, whose son saw the culprit and gave chase, firing at him. The other homes attacked were those of Grover C. Riley and Ed Reedy. The "gas man" visits occurred between 8 and 9 o'clock.

The attacks last night came after a single visit Sunday night, with Howard Crawford, of the Colon section between Cloverdale and Troutville, as the victim.

The chase has developed three clews:

1. The attacks nearly always occur around 9 o'clock at night and invariably at houses where there are no telephones.
2. In two instances the imprint of a woman's shoe has been found.
3. Physicians called to treat the victims are fairly certain the gas, causing nausea, was chlorine.

Schools Reopen In 2 Counties

Month's Holiday Saw CWA Corps Make Many Improvements.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Following a month of holidays during which civil works employes made many improvements on the grounds and buildings, public schools of Stafford and King George Counties reopened yesterday.

More than 400 men received employment on school projects, which included renovating and improving buildings, grounds, and sanitary facilities. The time lost from the regular session will be made up at the end of the term.

Promotions have resulted in changed personnel in some of the county schools. Carter W. Friend, former principal of the Tubeville Agricultural High School, succeeds John Billingsley, appointed surveyor for the Naval Proving Station at Dahlgren, on the faculty of King George High School. Mrs. Alice W. Purks has taken over the duties at Central School, and Miss Louise Gordon, of Spotsylvania County, has succeeded Arthur M. Potts at Windsor School. Mr. Potts is now county CWA supervisor.

Approximately $26,000 has been distributed to workers on Spotsylvania County CWA projects, it was announced by W. G. Dillard, disbursing officer, who revealed that $7,682.20 was paid out on last week's pay rolls. Four hundred and twenty-five persons are at work.

Montgomery Man Heads State Hatchery Board

Charles Hines, of Olney, Montgomery County, Md., has been appointed chairman of the State compliance committee for Maryland of the commercial and breeder hatchery code. County meetings will be held soon.

Mr. Hines says the new code will restrict production of poultry and eggs, and all farmers who sell 500 baby chicks a year or incubate for custom hatching 100 eggs a season, will be affected.

Augusta Given Clean Record By Jobs Chief

Letter Compliments Work Following Denial of Irregularities.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—George W. Guy, of Richmond, State director for the National Reemployment Service, has complimented the Staunton-Augusta office in a letter to James H. C. Grasty, manager of the office.

"It was indeed very encouraging to hear about such reassuring reports from our Staunton-Augusta office," Guy wrote. "You folks have made a number of placements which have been a great help to your community. In all of these placements we have only heard from a few disgruntled people."

Mr. Guy has announced that 114,688 persons were given employment in Virginia up to January 13, as follows: PWA, 14,192; CWA, 96,871; private, 3,625. For the week ended January 13 placements were: PWA, 1,646; CWA, 20,114; private, 270; total, 22,030.

The complimentary letter from Guy, dated January 20, bears out his recent statement that Augusta County was not one of eight or ten counties in the State in which alleged "irregularities and political considerations" had entered into the placing of persons in CWA jobs.

Speaking in Richmond last week, he said: "I should like for you to deny the report (in which Augusta was listed among the 'irregulars.') It is not true."

Census Takers Named.

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Enumerators to take the business census of Martinsville and Henry County have been appointed. The county workers include Miss Belva Sours and John H. Frye. Mrs. H. D. Whittle will handle the work in the city.

County Hires Foreman.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The Loundoun County supervisors ordered that the construction foreman, building an addition to the clerk's office, with CWA funds, be employed for 30 hours per week, the board to pay for the extra 15 hours per week, to speed up the work. Reduction of laborers' hours on various projects is greatly hampering the work in the county, some of which were started only last Friday.

Judge W. A. Metzger, a member of the building committee, estimated the increase in hours for the foreman would cost the county $100. The addition to the clerk's office includes enlarging the vault and construction of four office rooms for county office holders on the second floor.

Repairs to the barn on the alms farm, started last Friday, were halted yesterday until next Friday, which places the stock out in the weather until repairs are completed.

The Federal works pay roll in the county, which passed $6,000 last Saturday, will be cut by half this week, the administrator said.

Workers Learn First Aid.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Sixty CWA workers, one from each project here, began a course in first aid yesterday under supervision of the Red Cross. They will be trained to render first aid for fellow workers in case of accident.

County CWA Pay Peak.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 23 (Spl.). A new top in the CWA pay roll for Franklin County was reached here last week, when 2,525 men employed on projects were paid $32,077.88.

Old School Bell Removed.

Rectortown, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). An old belfry with its loud-toned bell which for more than 100 years called the pupils of Rectortown School to classes has fallen beneath the ax of a Civil Works Administration project.

When the Fauquier County schools CWA project was started the belfry was condemned because its timber had rotted.

Out of school hours the bell summoned the community for special meetings and spread alarms, including fire alarms.

Fewer Men, But More Pay.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Although the total number of men employed on CWA projects in Shenandoah County decreased last week, the weekly pay roll increased, H. G. Chandler, CWA administrator, disclosed.

In the week ended January 13, 693 men were employed on CWA projects, and the pay roll was about $5,000. In the week ended January 20, 617 men were employed, with a pay roll of about $7,000. Two weeks ago the pay roll was $3,600.

Danville Pay Roll Declines.

Danville, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The Danville Civil Works pay roll will be about one-fifth less this week than last, owing to the shortened working period ordained by the administrative board in Richmond. No more men are being put to work.

Last week the pay roll, amounting to $12,707.69 for 978 men, was the largest since the civil undertakings were initiated.

Editors Debate Code Saturday

Delmarva Meeting Called at Wilmington for 13 Counties.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The NRA code relating to newspapers will come in for considerable discussion at the annual meeting of the Delmarva Press Association Saturday, at the Hotel du Pont, Wilmington, Del., according to Frederick G. Usilton, editor of the Kent News here and president of the tri-State group.

William F. Metten, Wilmington editor and secretary of the association, has conferred with Federal officials for several weeks on the code and its workings and will submit a detailed report for discussion.

The following topics will be discussed by editors of 14 counties on the Delmarva Peninsula:

"The Best Editorial Page for a Weekly Newspaper," by G. Marshall Townsend, editor, of Milford, Del., Chronicle; "Best Methods of Gathering and Handling Local News with a Small Staff," C. L. Vincent, editor, Democratic Messenger, Snow Hill, Md.; "How Can Our National Advertising Problem Be Sloved?" by C. J. Pyle, of the News-Journal, Wilmington; "Local Advertising, How Can Rate-Cutting be Eliminated or Met?" Joseph H. Martin, publisher, the Sunday Star, Wilmington; "Should This Association Set Up a Committee on Ethics and if So What Should Be Its Scope?" Alfred T. Truitt, editor, the Wicomico News, Salisbury, Md.; "Paid Locals," Fred G. Usilton, the Kent News, Chestertown; and "What Are the Best Methods of Building Circulation?" Samuel E. Shannahan, editor, the Star-Democrat, Easton, Md.

George Carter, publisher of the Wilmington Evening Journal, is chairman of the program committee. Officers for the ensuing year will be chosen. Albert W. Cummins, vice president and S. E. Shannahan, C. Marshall Townsend and Herman C. Taylor, of Dover, members of the executive committee, will take an active part in the meeting.

Henry County to Hire Demonstration Agent

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The Henry County supervisors have decided to employ a farm demonstration agent for the county for one year, beginning February 1. W. A. Carr, who has been working in the county for three months with Department of Agriculture funds, will continue as county farm agent. The supervisors appropriated $660 to continue this department for the remaining 11 months of the year.

Henry County has been without a county farm agent for several years. J. Frank Wilson, of Fieldale, new member of the board from the Horse Pasture District, was named county board chairman for 1934.

Kazim Shriners Elect F. R. Porter Potentate

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.), Francis R. Porter, of Roanoke, has been elected potentate of Kazim Shrine Temple. Other newly elected officers are: Frank A. Wiley, of Salem, chief rabban; William A. Adair, Lexington, assistant rabban; Walker Pettyjohn, Lynchburg, high priest and prophet; Dr. M. S. Jenkins, Roanoke, oriental guide; A. F. Rawson, Roanoke, treasurer, and John T. Cullen, Roanoke, recorder.

H. M. Fox, H. C. Neren, Mr. Porter and Mr. Cullen will represent the temple at a meeting of the imperial council in Minneapolis, June 19-21.

Demands on Roanoke Hospital Gain in Year

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The annual report of the Roanoke City Hospital shows 1,710 patients were admitted in 1933 and the daily average of patients was 47, a slight increase over the previous year.

C. Francis Cocke has been elected president of the hospital for 1934. D. W. Flickwir and W. C. Stephenson are new vice presidents and H. G. Lacy is secretary-treasurer. Five trustees were reelected as follows: Mrs. C. P. Read, Dr. T. D. Armistead, C. F. Cocke, D. W. Flickwir and F. B. Thomas. Miss Sarah M. Bailey was appointed superintendent and H. C. Lacy, business manager.

School Loans Given Approval

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—Recovery Administration loan applications from 13 schools have been approved by the State Board of Education, according to Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction.

The following were listed as applicants for Federal funds: Moneta School, Bedford County, $89,500; Poquoson School, York County, $7,500; Booker T. Washington School, Suffolk, $8,400; New Hope School, Stafford County, $1,600; Falmouth High School, Stafford County, $3,200; Tappahannock School, Essex County, $26,000; Dinwiddie School, Dinwiddie County, $6,500; Hill School, Greensville County, $750; Peebles School, Greensville County, $750; Goochland School, Goochland County, $40,000. The Tappahannock loan would be in lieu of a $17,000 loan previously approved.

Listed as literary fund loans are Lee-Maury School, Caroline County, $1,500; Mica School, Caroline County, $1,500; Rosenwald School, Waynesboro, $1,500.

2 Cumberland Men Admit Owning Still

Held on Moonshine Charge, Pair Posts Bond.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Thomas J. Anderson on charges of owning a still and manufacturing liquor, Wade Brotemarkle and Joseph Melvin, both of Cumberland, were released yesterday under bond of $1,500 each.

The men admitted ownership of a 75-gallon still and other equipment seized in an Oak street house, according to Federal Investigator William R. Harvey. Brotemarkle was arrested Friday. Melvin was taken into custody when the still was seized.

Brotemarkle and Melvin exonerated Mrs. Margaret Carroll and Ellis Baily.

Youth Admits Shooting Girl; Claims Accident

Eastville, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—Page Goodman, colored youth, today admitted shooting 9-year-old Lillian Stein at the home of her parents here Friday night, but said it was accidental. He testified at a magistrate's hearing.

He said he intended merely to frighten the white girl when he called at the home of her parents and asked for tobacco. The case was sent on to the grand jury.

$26,000 "Fags" Theft Probed

Men Tell of Abduction in Auto While Truck Is Looted.

Richmond, Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Police are investigating the holdup of a truck near Petersburg, in which cigarettes, valued at $26,000, were stolen.

The truck, operated by Barnwell Brothers, of Richmond, was en route here from Winston-Salem with 500 cases of cigarettes. When just out of Petersburg, two passenger cars drove up, a shot was fired through the cab door of the truck, the two drivers were ordered down from the truck, and adhesive tape was bound over their eyes.

They were put in one of the autos and driven to Chilesburg, off the Washington highway, between Richmond and Washington. There they were released. Their truck, meanwhile, had been unloaded.

The two men returned to Richmond and reported the robbery.

The drivers believed they were followed from Winston-Salem. The robbers were polite, they said. Richmond police believe the robbers went to Washington with the cigarettes.

Funeral Held for Man Who Died Driving Truck

Staunton, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Funeral services were held in Covington yesterday for Benjamin F. Piner, 40, who fell dead while driving a truck on a street here Saturday. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Coroner T. M. Parkins said death was from natural causes.

A coincidence is the fact that Mr. Piner's father dropped dead a year ago while riding in a truck, driven by his son, on a Covington street. Piner leaves six children and a wife.

Berkeley Democrats Honor R. F. Whiting

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—R. F. Whiting, of Inwood, was chosen acting chairman and stated vice chairman of the Berkeley County Democratic Executive Committee last night. The chairman, Robert S. Thompson, is ill.

Whiting was named to the vice chairmanship made vacant by the death of former Judge Glenn S. Pitzer.

Court Upholds Coblentz Bank Stock Liability

Claims of Misrepresentation and Insolvency Denied by Two Judges.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard in the circuit court yesterday upheld the statutory double liability of stockholders of the closed Central Trust Co.

The opinion answered a petition filed by John J. Ghingher, State bank commissioner liquidating the assets of the bank, against Edwin P. Abbe and other stockholders, who sought to deny their liability on the ground that at the time they purchased the stock the trust company was insolvent and that the stock was misrepresented.

Mr. Ghingher originally filed a petition against 74 stockholders, asking the court to enforce assumption of the stockholders' double liability to the amount of their stock holdings. Later the court entered a decree pro confesso against the stockholders. Some of the stockholders mentioned in the decree then petitioned the court to relieve them of the double liability on the insolvency and misrepresentation grounds. State Senator Emory L. Coblentz was president of the closed bank.

After reciting the law relative to double liability, the opinion stated the majority of the stockholders had made no defense, adding:

"No evidence had been offered in support of the averment of insolvency and misrepresentation, but at a hearing recently the Court was requested by counsel for the defendants and plaintiffs to determine whether such proof could relieve the defendants of the liability asserted in the suit in view of the undisputed fact that they had accepted one or more dividends from the trust company after the acquisition of the stock and raised no question in regard to the validity of their stock purchases prior to the plaintiffs' appointment as receiver."

After reviewing the operation of the trust company the opinion said "the stockholders of the trust company, with their right of access to its records, had an opportunity not available to depositors to investigate its condition," adding:

"As between a stockholder and depositor who continues their respective relationships with the bank until the appointment of the receiver we think that under the circumstances the previously unasserted right of the stockholder to rescind his stock subscription on the ground that it was improperly issued is inferior to the right of the depositor to rely upon the right of the statutory liability involved in the ownership of his stock and declared by law to be an asset of the corporation in the event of insolvency."

The opinion further ruled deposit balances in the Central Trust Co. could not be set off against the amount of the stock liability for which stockholders are sued.

Family Reunion Heals Breach; Couple Remarry After 35 Years

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—A family reunion resulted in the remarriage of a couple divorced for 35 years, it was revealed in Gordonsville, near here, yesterday.

Mrs. Sue Erskine Newman, of Windsor, near Gordonsville, again married Albert Edholm, retired Omaha (Nebr.) jeweler, in Cleveland, Ohio, on New Year's Day. The couple were divorced five years after their marriage 40 years ago. Mrs. Newman had married twice and Mr. Edholm once since then.

During the intervening years, Mr. Edholm and his wife had met frequently when the former visited their two daughters. At Christmas Mr. Edholm spent the holidays with one daughter, Mrs. J. C. Drouillard, in Cleveland. The other daughter, Mrs. R. E. Conrad, of South Bend, Ind., and Mrs. Newman were also spending the holidays in the Drouillard home.

Mrs. Edholm is a sister of the late Albert R. Erskine, former head of the Studebaker Corporation in South Bend, Ind.

Caroline Health Agency Assured

State to Assign Officer for County Work.

Denton, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Caroline County, the only Maryland county now without a full-time public health officer, soon will have a complete health service, conforming to State standards, according to county commissioners who have conferred with Dr. Robert H. Riley, State director of public health.

A health officer will be appointed by the State Department with approval of local authorities. His duties will be to try to combat epidemic diseases among children of school age and to improve the sanitation in schools, tourist camps, homes, dairies, canneries and summer resorts. The officer will not conduct a private practice of medicine. The plan is said to have the approval of the Caroline County Medical Society, which will appoint a committee to confer with him.

Eugene G. Anderson, county director of sanitation under the CWA, is directing the work of fourteen men in a sanitation program to last until July 1. John J. Bunting, of Salisbury, is director for the nine Eastern Shore counties.

Police Trace Missing Man

Fear for Life Felt After Disappearance; Car Is Discovered.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 23 (AP).—Fear for the life of Fred B. Ashworth, 50, missing business man of Huntington, W. Va., has been expressed by Paul H. Gooch, Huntington officer, who is here searching for him.

Gooch said Ashworth's automobile was located here last week in a garage, but attendants were unable to identify a picture of Ashworth as one of four men in the car when it was left.

"Ashworth was accustomed to picking up hitch-hikers on business trips through Kentucky," the officer said. "I believe he has met foul play."

Gooch said Mrs. Ashworth received the garage claim check January 17 by mail, accompanied by a note saying, "I'm sorry."

By checks drawn on his personal account, Ashworth was traced from Huntington to Cave City, Ky.

Holdup Man Given Life Prison Term

Third Conviction Brings Drastic Sentence.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Dayton Sorrel, colored, was convicted of robbing Miss Dorothy Hill, theater cashier, today in Judge D. H. Rogers' Circuit Court. The conviction is Sorrel's third offense and carries a mandatory life sentence.

Sorrel accosted Miss Hill on November 29, 1933, as she was walking home from the Pitts Jefferson Theater and robbed her of $154.65. The defense appealed for a new trial. Sentence was deferred.

3 Felony Cases Up in Jefferson Circuit Court

"Painted Horse" Incident Also to Be Heard at Charles Town.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The January session of Judge D. H. Rogers' Circuit Court reopened here yesterday to misdemeanor charge and several civil cases.

Felony charges against Dayton Sorrel, colored, accused of robbing Miss Dorothy Hill, cashier of the Pitts Jefferson Theater, after holding her up at the point of a gun as she walked home from the showhouse, were heard yesterday.

Hubert Hale, of Hagerstown, Md., will stand trial Friday, charged with assaulting and robbing Peter Painter. E. K. Gibbons, of Baltimore, will be tried next week on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He is accused of defrauding the Thomas Jefferson Hotel by inducing the manager to cash an invalid check.

The case of Austin Twyman, accused of driving while drunk, will be heard Thursday.

Indictments were found by the grand jury and cases set for trial at the first day of the session last Tuesday.

The widely discussed "painted horse" case again will attract public attention January 30, when Michael Krock and Constable Merle E. Alger will face charges of contempt of court. Crock and Alger are accused of violating the court's direction as to disposal of Hustle Over, disguised race horse which figured in recent litigation here.

Ten Years for Murder.

Lewisburg, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—George Fogus was convicted of second-degree murder in the Greenbrier County Circuit Court here for slaying Clyde Riggsby at Brownstown last August and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. The jury failed to agree when his case was tried in November. Elmer King, indicted in the same case, was released.

Two Lie All Night In Cold After Upset

One Pinned, Other Dazed, for Hours on Mountain.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Glenn Kidwell, of here, and Fred Hill, of Winchester, Va., tobacco salesmen, are recovering today from injuries received when their automobile turned over on a curve and rolled 50 feet down a steep incline.

The accident occurred at night and the next morning a motorist saw the car down the mountainside with a light still burning. State police at Moorefield found Hill pinned beneath a heavy timber and unable to talk after the all-night exposure in the extreme cold weather. Farther down the slope lay Kidwell, unconscious.

Both men were rushed to a Cumberland, Md., hospital. Hill was found to have a broken jaw, while Kidwell had scalp lacerations, a sprained ankle, body bruises, and a possible broken neck.

State Approves Increase In Romney Water Rates

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Increased water rates for service in this city have been permitted by the West Virginia Public Service Commission, retroactive to January 1, John L. Lehman, recorder, said today.

First 6,000 gallons used per month, 50 cents per 1,000 gallons; next 14,000 gallons, 40 cents per 1,000 gallons; next 30,000 gallons, 25 cents per 1,000 gallons, and all over 50,000 gallons per month, 12 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Virginia House Group Rejects Hotel Liquor

Committee Two-to-One in Favor of State Dispensaries.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 23.—Rejection by the House finance committee of proposals for sale of liquor in hotels and restaurants appeared likely tonight.

An unofficial poll disclosed committee sentiment favored strict adherence to a State-operated dispensary plan by a margin of two to one. A report probably will be submitted to the House Thursday or Friday.

While the hotel and restaurant issue unquestionably will be debated on the floor, champions of a State store monopoly would wield a distinct advantage if they gained committee support.

Drink Sale Amendment.

Senator Aubrey Weaver, Front Royal, drafted an amendment to the dispensary bill for submission to the Senate finance committee. He would vest in the alcoholic beverage-control board authority to license sale of whisky by the drink in hotels and restaurants.

Senator Hill Montague, Richmond, advanced a bill calling for a 2 per cent retail sales tax, which he contended would yield the State $2,000,000 a year. Many necessities would be excluded from its provisions.

Gov. Peery and other administration leaders, however, have indicated they would unite against all sales tax proposals.

A successful fight for recommittal to committee of the Holt Congressional redistricting bill was led by Senator John S. Battle, Charlottesville.

As Democrats outnumber Republicans in the Senate, Battle won wide support when he charged transfer of Albemarle, Madison and Green Counties and the City of Charlottesville from the old Seventh to the Eighth District would result in election of a G. O. P. representative.

Population Differences.

Battle cited action of State courts in declaring unconstitutional an earlier redistricting measure. He contended the Holt bill contained difference in population which would bring similar court action should it be passed. He complained population differences between districts were as high as 68,000.

Delegate L. G. White, Charlottesville, sponsored a bill under which county boards of supervisors would absorb school boards.

CWA Staff Unearths Old Story Of Maryland Girl Saving Flag

Sharpsburg Maiden Used Strategy in Defying Confederates.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—The story of Teresa Kretzer, Sharpsburg girl, who defied the Confederate troops and saved her Stars and Stripes despite the orders of a Confederate officer to destroy it—one of the true stories of the Battle of Antietam, unearthed last week by a corps of CWA workers making a survey of the battle—promises to become almost as famous in history as the story of Barbara Frietchie and her flag.

According to the legend, Sharpsburg was disturbed on the afternoon of September 15, 1862, by news that the Confederate army under Gen. Lee was moving toward the village. But Teresa Kretzer, an ardent Unionist, displayed a huge Union flag across the front of her home, as had been her daily custom.

A company of Confederate soldiers halted before her home. The captain knocked, and when the girl came to the door he ordered her to take down the flag. She refused.

The captain became angry and told her that if the flag was not down when he returned from Lee's headquarters, he would take it down himself. To this Teresa responded:

"I will see that flag in ashes before your hands touch it."

When the captain returned, he found the flag had been taken down, but to avoid a recurrence of the girl's defiance, he ordered the house searched for the flag. It could not be found.

Finally, Teresa took the captain into the yard and showed him an ash-heap, saying: "There lies the flag—I told you that I would rather see it in ashes than in your hands."

The captain, content with the apparent destruction of the flag, left. But when he was out of sight, Teresa dug in the ash-heap and removed from a buried box containing the flag, unharmed.

The same flag was used for many years to drape caskets of soldiers buried in the National Cemetery there until it fell to pieces.

A Boss Passes.

John H. McCooey, who died Sunday, was one of the political bosses against whom the electorate rose in revolt last fall. As leader of the Brooklyn Democratic organization, larger in constituency than Tammany, Mr. McCooey suffered a complete rout in the recent New York mayoralty contest. He lost the borough presidency, his city-wide ticket and staved off repudiation of his leadership only by postponing meetings of the county committee. In title alone was he still leader of the organization when he died.

Mr. McCooey's death will hasten the disintegration of the Tammany organization of John F. Curry. Recent events have shown him surprisingly weak, anyhow. His organization is in open revolt and he remains in office, it would seem, only until the discontent can crystallize behind a suitable leader.

Advocates of good government everywhere entertain the hope that the upheavals in New York and other cities where bosses are tottering will throw up a more enlightened and more unselfish political leadership. The late Brooklyn leader was a firm believer in political success through attention to the "personal welfare" of his constituents. That implies, of course, use of the spoils system to the utmost, largely without regard to merit, and a heavily financed organization to carry on the "welfare" work. Investigations in New York have disclosed that much of the money for party organizations comes from what Tammany calls "honest graft"—"contributions" to the war chest by persons who have received their contracts.

Mr. McCooey stood for that system and profited by it in the 24 years in which he held office. He was party, moreover, to one of the malodorous deals which helped arouse public resentment against the political masters. The Hofstadter investigation disclosed that Republican and Democratic leaders had got together and apportioned judgeships almost as if they were swag. Mr. McCooey blandly confessed that he had used the occasion to bring off a fat 14-year judicial position for his young son. That confession, plus the revelations of the Seabury investigation, brought New Yorkers a picture of the honeycomb of favoritism, nepotism and corruption they were financing.

Our National Income.

A broad statistical view of our descent from the apex of prosperity to the nadir of depression is contained in a study of the National income which has just been submitted to the Senate by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Detailed and complete information on this subject has been a serious handicap to Congress and to business organizations that are trying to ameliorate the effects of the depression and to work out adjustments in the economic system. In the language of Willard L. Thorp, director of the bureau, this study "marks a new step forward in our comprehension of our economic machinery and processes." Continuation of this national stock taking from year to year would be well worth its cost.

Only a summary of the elaborate data sent to the Senate is available to the public. But it clearly indicates the major trends of declining income for capital, management and labor between 1929 and 1932. Income distributed to individuals throughout the Nation in 1929 amounted to $81,000,000,000, and in 1932 to $49,000,000,000, a decline of 40 per cent. However, this figure does not represent the total shrinkage in our economic activity during those years. Income actually produced amounted to $83,000,000,000 in 1929 and fell to $38,300,000,000 in 1932, a decline of 54 per cent. In other words, a great deal of fat stored up in good times was burned up in the lean years.

In 1932 alone American industry drew $10,603,000,000 from its previous savings and distributed it in the form of interest, dividends, salaries, and wages. The excess of income distributed over income produced amounted to $8,639,000,000 in 1931. By this means the effects of the economic stagnation which afflicted the world during those years must have been appreciably mitigated. In considering any plans to limit the profits of industry or otherwise to revolutionize the economic system these findings are highly significant.

It is true, however, that in the distribution of income during 1932 wages suffered most severely, with a falling off estimated at 60 per cent in a selected group of industries. Salaries dropped only 40 per cent. Interest payments were maintained rather uniformly up to 1932, while property income distributed fell 30 per cent. In other words, the workingman received a smaller portion of the distributed income in 1932 than he did in 1929. These findings raise a broad question as to the proper division of available disbursements between labor and stockholders. When workingmen are left to the mercy of government doles, taxes on industry must be increased to meet these extra costs. No conclusions are drawn from these findings by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, but they immediately suggest the need for a more direct method of supporting the unemployed in times of economic depression.

Through Bogs And Quicksands.

With House opposition effectively steamrollered, it has become politically safe for the Administration to vouchsafe to the public some inkling of what the gold reserve bill really means. Such, at least, is the conclusion which must be drawn from the frank, if somewhat naive, testimony presented to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on Monday by Prof. James Harvey Rogers, one of the leading sponsors of this legislation.

The Presidential message on the gold reserve bill, as delivered to Congress on January 15, concluded with the flat assertion that "the definite purpose of the Government (is) to maintain the credit of that Government and, at the same time, to provide a sound medium of exchange which will serve the needs of our people." To those lulling assurances Prof. Rogers has added an informative appendix.

A basic purpose of the bill, the country is now told, is to create "a direct inflationary influence of first magnitude." And the really clever part of the program, the professor suggests with sublime complacency, is that this inflationary influence would be "uncounteractable by Federal Reserve action." In Dr. Rogers' words the "well-informed"—and he seems to intimate that Congress is scarcely to be counted in this exclusive group—expect from the pending legislation "almost complete assurance of early uncontrollable credit expansion." These frank observations are indeed a curious commentary on the President's statement, just last week, that "our National currency must be maintained as a sound currency which, in so far as possible, will have a fairly constant standard of purchasing power."

Unlike the average Congressman, Mr. Owen D. Young admits that two days is insufficient time for a trained mind to grasp all the potential troubles inherent in this dubious measure. But in his brilliantly lucid and admirably objective testimony before the Senate committee he quietly drew attention to some of the implications omitted in the professorial exuberance of Dr. Rogers.

Mr. Young indorsed the Yale economist's remark that the projected inflation would be uncontrollable by the Federal Reserve System, pointing out that the bill perhaps inadvertently eliminates that system as a factor controlling credit volume. He further pointed out that this proposed legislation opens up the prospect of an inflation uncontrollable by any agency, which is one of the issues which no Administration spokesman has as yet attempted to meet. And, finally, Mr. Young took the occasion to show that the national need is not the uncontrollable credit expansion which this bill seeks, but utilization of the abundant credit already lying dormant in the banks.

Senator Bankhead—How much expansion of credit do you think we really need?

Mr. Young—It is not the expansion of credit that we need. It is the use of credit which we need. We now have eight or nine billions of inert potential credit in our banking system, and we can not get it used.

It does not require more than an elementary knowledge of economics—indeed, it only requires a modicum of common sense—to realize that when the problem is utilization of credit already abundantly at hand, the wise solution is not the magical creation of more credit "literally out of thin air," as Dr. Rogers says. Obviously, measures designed to free purchasing power now latent should come first. For such measures, as the President himself says, a "sound medium of exchange" is essential. Yet his advisers are freely asserting that a major merit of the pending bill is the way in which it would skyrocket the price level.

Where short cuts are an essential part of the recovery program there is no disposition to question their utilization, even though they lead to such unsavory developments as that now revealed in the CWA. Where short cuts are not essential, they should have mature and open consideration before the Nation is asked to follow them. And when short cuts, beyond being unnecessary, lead through such bogs and quicksands as those of "uncounteractable inflation," not merely unhurried scrutiny but intelligent and hard-hitting opposition are essential to National well-being.

Shipping Subsidies.

Secretary Roper appears to be just one step ahead of Congress in his determination to inaugurate a new policy of dealing with ocean mail subsidies. Every mail contract now in effect is to be analyzed. By a continuing study the Secretary hopes to bring forth complete information as to the differential between American and foreign shipbuilding and operating costs. Indications are that the future policy of subsidizing the American merchant marine will be based on this data.

Inexcusable laxity in the awarding of mail contracts has already been revealed by Senator Black's committee. Secretary Roper's statement to the effect that the Government has lent $145,000,000 to shipping companies since 1928, of which $126,000,000 is still outstanding, partly in arrears, further suggests that some beneficiaries of these subventions have taken advantage of governmental generosity. Because of the world-wide slump in shipping it is difficult to draw general conclusions. But a searching investigation is certainly in order.

The Government will not hesitate temporarily to get further into the shipping business, Secretary Roper says, if that appears necessary to protect national interests. Before such steps are taken it would be necessary to inquire whether the Government could operate the shipping lines established by law without greater cost to taxpayers than is involved in the present arrangements. If existing abuses are really eliminated, action in the direction of Government ownership might well prove both unnecessary and undesirable.

Haste Makes Waste.

It is necessary to go back to the copy books to find a moral for what has happened to the Civil Works Administration. The truth of the old maxim, "Haste Makes Waste," has been seldom better demonstrated.

Back in November, the Administration realized that glowing estimates of the number of men who would be absorbed by public works projects during the winter months could not be realized. There was a tendency in some quarters to blame Secretary Ickes for not rushing projects through, but experience has demonstrated the soundness of his position. Departure from the principle he has followed caused the trouble.

President Roosevelt announced on November 8 that 2,000,000 men would be put to "regular work at regular wages" by November 16 and that in the month following 2,000,000 more would be given employment. Theoretically it was an ideal way to accomplish two objectives: put men to work and stimulate purchasing power. In theory, also, it was in accord with sound social practices in that it required those receiving aid to perform some service in return.

Actually, the CWA has become a Frankenstein which perturbs its creators. Putting 4,000,000 men to work in 39 days on a restricted number of projects was a monumental employment task that would have challenged an elaborately prepared organization. There was no time for adequate preparation. All sorts of persons, apparently without regard to qualification, were drawn into the task of assigning jobs and supervising work and purchases. Wages were fixed arbitrarily, without enough regard for local scales. The general recklessness is attested by the fact that Mr. Hopkins was off $8,000,000 a week in his estimates of what the scheme would cost. Sloppiness all along the line constituted an invitation to local grafters and petty politicians to use an organization designed to help the needy to line their own pockets.

Unfortunately, this sad experience is likely to discredit features of a permanent social program based upon what we have learned during the depression. Although the CWA has been frankly termed a temporary measure, opponents of an enlightened, progressive and intelligent employment policy will point to its story as an argument against "social experimentation."

The First Step.

The alacrity with which we recognized the government of Col. Mendieta in Cuba effectively demonstrates that even though our policy precludes armed intervention, there is full appreciation of the fact that our favor is essential to the stability of Cuban governments. We have in effect intervened with our moral weight in behalf of the new executive.

Nor can a realistic approach to the situation condemn extending a friendly hand to Col. Mendieta, precipitate as it was. His coming to power apparently represents reaction against the swing to the left which followed the downfall of Cespedes. Had we not chosen the psychological time to back him, the Cuban people might have swung much further to the left than they have. That danger is present even yet.

Col. Mendieta is a man whose integrity is generally respected. He is a veteran of the war which won Cuba's independence and he was a member of the junta which directed the fight to overthrow Machado. Apparently he had a better chance than anybody else to succeed in stabilizing political conditions.

Recognition of his government opens the way for us to tender that economic aid to which we are obligated by implications of the Platt amendment and the reciprocity treaty. Tentatively, the president's program is said to embrace four points: Relocation of surplus employes of sugar plantations on subsistence farms; reorganization of Cuban finances, including external debts; inclusion of Cuba in a sugar agreement, and a new reciprocal tariff more favorable to the island. Without substantial American aid, where it can be properly rendered along those lines, diplomatic recognition would be a mocking gesture.

Prof. Warren Might Answer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you, as editor, and elucidator on public affairs, kindly enlighten a subscriber groping in the darkness of our monetary policy?

To begin with, our unit of value was based on a gold dollar containing 23.22 gr. of fine gold, which based on our ounce of gold valued at $20.67, fixed the price of one grain at four and one-sixth cents; a price fixed by international agreement. Now carefully note this point. No matter how much or how little the gold supply increased or decreased, the price remained the same, and would have continued so, if the nations to the agreement had remained members to the agreement; or if they had established an international bank of exchange.

However, the misfortune of the World War depleted the gold reserves of many of the nations, forcing them off of the gold standard and compelling them to buy gold in the open market, which resulted in increasing the price of gold to $34.44 an ounce or seven and one-sixth cents a grain. This increased the value of our dollar, making it a commodity and a profitable source of commerce instead of a medium of exchange and threatened to deplete our gold reserve, due to our policy of exchanging our paper dollars valued at 100 cents for gold dollars valued at $1.50 and up; also allowing our debtors to pay us with 14 grains of gold for every dollar owed us.

The first move to protect our gold and credit was to declare an embargo on gold and to confiscate all the available supply. The next move was to see how high the price of gold could be driven. Having reached this point, a revaluation became possible at the rate of 14 grains to the doller. Now one point must be made clear. This is not a devaluation or permanent stabilization, but a revaluation at its present market price. By this act of revaluation the proposed dollar of 14 grains of gold will be worth 100 cents as far as its intrinsic gold value is concerned, and neither a devalued 60-cent dollar nor an overvalued $1.50 plus dollar. The storing of the profit of two billion dollars of excess gold is a safeguard and a protection against any fall in price and to meet all international exchange demands.

With a free gold market, and in the absence of any international agreements, stabilization is impossible. The only way to stabilize the gold unit is by a fixed price by international agreement. Having learned this lesson, how would it do to stabilize our home dollar by fixing the price of commodities.

Applause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Little in life is so stimulating as applause, old and young like it.

The great actor waits in joyful anticipation before the lowered curtain. The musician, the writer and inventor all yearn for the approval of the world.

And, now, sitting before his methodical desk, the little Government clerk wonders—"To be or not to be, that is the question."

He is waiting for his applause—applause from Uncle Sam which is truly due him for services rendered with patience and loyalty in the most difficult of financial times.

And somehow, somewhere, the idea has grown that Uncle Sam will realize the fineness of his Government children and that this gentleman, with the long red, white and blue coattails, is turning toward the Government clerk with his applause.

Here's hoping, Uncle Sam, may it come, not only from the tips of your long, capable fingers—a 5 per cent applause, but a big, round, full palm—15 per cent applause.

Favoring CWA Extension.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will the CWA stop on February 15? God forbid! For two years the husband and father in our family has had applications in business firms over the East and South and South America, with no results except the promise of many good places as soon as things get going.

Things have just started rolling on CWA money, but a little more time is needed. Last month we spent all of our CWA money on Christmas, and had a happy time. Ordinarily, I would say it was impossible to enjoy Christmas if one's husband had a position that would last only 10 weeks, but up to December 1 we thought he would have no place at all. Then came the President's CWA and our little daughter had a most enjoyable visit from Santa.

This month I was able to buy my little child some muchly needed winter clothes and pay one of the bills that has been long overdue. If the CWA continues, I believe, with my husband, that some of the promises will materialize and we will be happily settled again. If not, I can see nothing but the old depression again.

The depression has taught me many constructive lessons, for which I am thankful. It has also left one fear in my heart—a concern for my husband's health when he is worried over his family's security—because we have recently had a death in my family caused by worry. My father was a bank president, and though his bank was all right, the worry was too much for him.

Is not the health of 6,000,000 men and their families worth risking $2,000,000,000 more on? We of the CWA are asking Congress to stand back of the President in the extension of his recovery program. Incidentally, I feel it my duty to voice to Congress and the President the appreciation felt by two people in the vast army of CWA directors in 48 States.

Will History Repeat Itself?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would seem to the man who looks on "from the road" that members of the Administration and many ardent supporters are too young to remember the stress and strain through the years from '65 to '79, when specie payment was resumed.

We got 8 cents a dozen for our eggs, but it took five dozen to buy a spool of cotton thread, and the present writer was the victim of one of those transactions. We had "shinplasters," in denominations of 3 cents, 5 cents, 10 cents, 15 cents, 25 cents and 50 cents and greenback dollar bills and it took 18 of those to buy the farmer's boots. We rarely saw a silver piece larger than a dime, and even those were scarce. No one had any gold, and postage stamps were used to "make change."

If these gentlemen will consult their histories they will find that 14 acts were passed by as many sessions of Congress to stabilize the currency and make gold and silver do satisfactory teamwork, but gave it up in '73 by dropping silver and adopting the single gold standard. Then we could see what real money was, and then in October, '78, the greenback became worth 100 cents (though the law called for a legal tender value two months later) since when the country has not been in distress because of an inferior standard of value. No economic disturbance has been due to its failure "to ring true on the counters of the world," up to two years ago. Had it been honestly treated in the last decade the depression from which we suffer would doubtless have been avoided.

What a 50-cent dollar will do to us remains to be seen; but "from the road" it seems like cutting in two the incomes based on the 100-cent dollar. Will not some one who is wise enough, and who will not guess at it, tell us?

Chain Stores Don't Succeed by Using the Profits of One to Support the Others

By Robert Quillen.

Solving the farm problem by means of cash relief is very much like using kerosene to put out a fire.

You seldom hear the truth about it, for the truth gives offense without mending matters, but the problem can't be solved until people understand it.

In the first place, it isn't true that all farms are mortgaged and all farmers hopelessly in debt.

Those who were debt-free when the boom began and thereafter "lived at home," producing necessary food and feed and wisely refusing to buy unnecessary machinery, are free of debt still and safe in good times and bad.

There are others, good farmers working good soil, who are in debt and close to ruin through no fault of their own. The debt they assumed to save labor or increase production seemed justified by their solvency and their prospects. They were tripped and trapped by the collapse of the boom, as business men in town were.

But there is another and more numerous class, impoverished in good times as well as bad, whose continued preservation serves only to spoil the feast they can not share.

Some live close to starvation because they are lazy and shiftless or illiterate and incompetent. They would fail at any undertaking.

Some fail because they are not farmers but one-crop growers who live out of paper sacks and buy or do without the things they should raise.

But these and other variations of this unfortunate class are doomed to failure in any case because the soil they till is too poor to raise anything but blisters.

They can't make a living, yet they produce enough in the aggregate to break the market and ruin farmers who could prosper without their competition.

There was a time when every village boasted a print shop and hand-set newspaper it couldn't support. The owners did enough printing to hurt larger shops, but not enough to make a living. And eventually they starved out and got jobs in town, for there was no Government subsidy to feed them.

That is what must happen to the tiller of worthless soil before the farm problem can be solved.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THE suggestion is going around in political circles that the Democrats might find a happy solution for their National chairmanship problem by turning the job over to Charlie Michelson. It would not be at all surprising if it caught on.

BARGERON.

Jim Farley unquestionably wants to be relieved of the job. It is not a question of replacing him as the party's political manager. As the Postmaster General he is that and will continue to be, just as future Postmaster Generals will be the political manager of the President who appoints them, unless our whole system of rewarding political workers is revised.

There are duties connected with the chairmanship, however, some of them quite routine, which crowd Farley and inasmuch as his holding of the two jobs is subjecting him to criticism, anyone who knows him appreciates that he would like very much to let go. It is another matter, though, simply to step out and bring on a scramble for the job when Mr. Roosevelt has no one in mind for it.

Charlie would work in close cooperation with Jim, of course, and furthermore his appointment would probably keep down the jealousies of others who now have their eyes on the job. The reaction would most likely be that it had gone to a man who had richly earned it.

* * * *

Perhaps no man is more widely known among politicians than Charlie. In his years of service as correspondent here of the New York World he was thrown with them and the Republicans themselves will attest to the effectiveness of his publicity against them in the years leading up to and through the 1932 campaign. He is still in charge of publicity for the National committee, but, inasmuch as Mr. Roosevelt is doing a good job making his own publicity, they have been using Charlie pretty much as a trouble shooter. The NRA is his chief worry at present.

Insofar as his friends are concerned, and it would be difficult to find anyone who knows him who isn't a friend, the appointment would be looked upon as a fitting honor with which he could round out a most illustrious career. To put it bluntly he would give the office a dignity which we have not always associated with it.

* * * *

It's a funny thing about the "Old Marster" as I like personally to think of him, that although he has been in politics up to his hilt, been all through the bitternesses of the game, any enemies that he has incurred are far and few between. He has been out of active newspaper work now for several years, but strangely enough he is till looked upon more or less as the dean, not as the dean of newspapermen necessarily, but as sort of the "dean around here."

Oh, I don't know that anything will come of the suggestion. I haven't the slightest idea whether it has been entertained in high quarters. Certainly it hasn't by Charlie himself.

If the Republicans were in power, no similar suggestion would be worth the paper it was written on because they have the knack of doing unpopular things. The present crowd have a way with people and things, have a way of getting on. They have a most pleasing personality.

And I suppose I am undoubtedly influenced in passing the suggestion along by the insistence of some that I should be constructive sometimes. It would be most difficult.

In fact, this is the most constructive thing I can think of at the moment.

The Best Ten.

A Pittsburgh correspondent writes that in the nineties, about the time that he was graduated from Princeton, the New York Sun selected and editorially commented on the world's greatest ten novels. As he remembers the list, it contained Les Miserables, The Scarlet Letter, Vanity Fair, David Copperfield, The Cloister and the Hearth, Westward Ho, and the last four he is a little uncertain of, but thinks they were Hypatia, Henry Esmond, A Tale of Two Cities, and either Foul Play or The Wandering Jew.

Now those were the palmy days of the New York Sun, under the brilliant editorship of Charles A. Dana, with his associates Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Lord and Mr. Laffan. Dana himself was a scholar and uncompromising lover of good English. I do not think he could have included Foul Play, Hypatia, or Westward Ho in a list of the world's best ten. Perhaps, he was making a list of the best ten in the English language, in which case my correspondent's query as to The Wandering Jew could be answered in the negative.

And if it were a list of the world's best ten, even if only vaguely remembered, how conspicuous is the absence of all the Russians! And yet, that omission would have been possible. The great Russian masters were then available mostly in German and French translations. Nathan Haskell Dole has given us Anna Karenina, for which we should be eternally grateful, and Isabel Hapgood had made some important translations and Eugene Schuyler had made available three books by Turgeney.

Blankets Sent To Help Needy In W. Virginia

40,000 Will Be Given Out; 2,959 Tons of Coal Distributed.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). State relief authorities have announced that 40,000 woolen blankets are on the way to West Virginia for distribution among the poor. Shipment is being made by Federal relief officers.

During the first two weeks of this month, 2,959 tons of coal were distributed to needy families in West Virginia. The distribution is being continued through local dealers, who are paid for their services and the coal is replaced by the Federal Government.

Ninety-five carloads of salt pork also have been distributed to distressed families in the State, and additional quantities, together with supplies of smoked pork, are being shipped. Cod liver oil and halibut oil are also being distributed among undernourished children.

Records disclose 74,508 men and women at work on CWA jobs in West Virginia at present. Last week they worked 10,054,048 man hours and were paid $1,068,624.47. Additional service projects are employing 2,216 persons, of whom 1,974 are women.

B. & O. Engineer Retires After 47 Years' Service

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Completing 47 years of service, Joseph F. Barnett has been retired by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. Barnett, a locomotive engineer, made his last run on Christmas Eve and is now on the pension roll.

A native of Hancock, Md., he entered the railroad service as a fireman in January, 1857, later becoming passenger fireman. In 1890 he was promoted to engineer and recently was engineer on the "Package Local" between Cumberland and Martinsburg.

How About the Big, Bad Wolf? He Has Pigs But Can't Find 'Em

Luray, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Because he does not know the number of hogs and pigs he owns, S. K. Sours is confronted with a Herculean task.

The Government, in a few days, will put in operation its program of reducing the number of hogs in this county. Sours has only a general conception of the number of pigs which belong to him, as the most of them are scattered throughout the Blue Ridge from Compton, 10 miles north of Luray, to Skyland, embracing more than 20 miles of isolated mountain territory. Some of the hogs are said to be roaming in Rappahannock and Madison Counties, having crossed the top of the Blue Ridge.

Hundreds have become so wild that humans seldom lay eyes on them. Nine or 10 years ago, Sours turned out ten or twelve sows to forage on acorns and other mountain mast. The offspring, Sours believes, now numbers four or five hundred. When butchering time comes each year, Sours hires two score men to help him round up the hogs he wants to slaughter. Occasionally, he rounds up as many as a dozen of his wild hogs; some times he is able to capture only three or four. They are always fat; their meat is tender and juicy from the acorns on which they have fattened.

The hogs, used to roaming the mountains alone, have become vicious, at times having to be killed with shotguns. The Government is willing to pay Sours $5 for each hog he can produce. H. G. Clark, of Luray, Page County agricultural agent, is helping Sours to devise some means by which he can receive $5 for each hog he is willing to turn over to the Government.

2 Cooks Freed In Store Holdup

Pair Acquitted Although Named by Victims of Robbery.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Arthur Haskos, 46, and Arthur Zarkos, 21, cooks, were acquitted of the charge of holding up the Thomas grocery here by a corporation court, last night. Harvey Thomas and his mother, Mrs. Hattie Thomas, who were in their store at the time of the holdup, named the two men as the bandits.

Both prosecution and defense had several witnesses from Annapolis, Md., where Haskos lived before coming to Fredericksburg.

Three character witnesses for the prosecution, all former partners or associates of Haskos at Annapolis, testified against the defendant.

Melvin Powell and Nelson Staples, charged with breaking into and robbing Goolrick's Pharmacy and Pitt's Poolroom, were sentenced to a year each.

The jury hearing the cases included Edgar M. Young, foreman; W. J. Tinder, George W. Heflin, G. J. Hunt, John W. Allison, C. B. Carmichael, R. G. Hilldrup, P. E. Baker, J. B. Rawlings, Chancellor King and J. M. Evans.

Grange Maps Year's Work

Virginia Officer to Meet for Short Course in March.

Bedford, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—James H. Rogers, lecturer of the Virginia State Grange, has announced the 1934 program of work for subordinate and pomona granges throughout the State. In March every lecturer, every deputy and other officers will meet in Blacksburg for a three-day lecturers' conference and short course, led by James C. Farmer, National lecturer, of South Newbury, N. H.; B. L. Hummel, rural sociologist, of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Mr. Rogers, in cooperation with the V. P. I. agricultural department.

The program will include the following subjects: Relation of the grange and the rural church, plans for "Rural Life Day" to be held May 6 under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the grange, agricultural topics, homemaking topics, the TVA and EHFA, the farm woman, the farm home, grange co-ops, community betterment, Virginia night, the grange young people, county government, publicity, music, dramatics and soil conservation.

Tin Plate Company Resumes Operation

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The N. & G. Taylor tin plate plant resumed full operation yesterday. Production on a 100 per cent basis will continue for an indefinite period.

Officials are optimistic and speak of general improved conditions.

West Virginia's 4 Million Road Plan Approved

Lopaconing, Md., Hopes to Circumvent CWA Rule Shortening Hours.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Approval of State road contracts by Gov. H. G. Kump this week for nearly $4,000,000 has paved the way for the start of extensive road construction in West Virginia under a PWA loan and grant. Ernest L. Bailey, State road commissioner, said the work will begin about March 1.

The contracts will go to Washington for action by PWA authorities.

Approximately $5,000,000 will be received from the Federal Government altogether. State road bonds from a $50,000,000 revolving State fund will secure the Federal loan. This money is exclusive of other PWA funds assigned West Virginia and is not involved in legal tangles and test cases.

CWA Hour Cut Appealed.

Lonaconing, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Lonaconing CWA workers may qualify for a 24-hour week instead of being reduced to 15 hours, as ordered by Federal Civil Works Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. There are approximately 160 workers here.

The order says "CWA workers in communities of less than 2,500 are to work 15 hours only." Lonaconing contends its population is more than 2,500. Mayor Hugh Rankin Muir today said:

"If it is necessary, I will order a recensus of Lonaconing, but I don't think it will be needed. I believe Lonaconing can qualify as a municipality of over 2,500, even though the census of 1930 gave us 2,426."

Three Jobs Under Way.

Three projects, all calling for grading and surfacing of streets, are under construction. Allegany street project has been completed except for top dressing. Hanekamp street is to be widened, graded and surfaced, and the Beechwood road job calls for grading and surfacing.

The Big Vein Hill project has been approved by the State CWA board, and work probably will start when the Hanekamp and Allegany streets projects are completed. The Big Vein Hill job will cost approximately $12,000, and $9,500 will be spent for labor. The project calls for 1,504 feet of 10-inch sewer, 2,000 feet of street surfacing, averaging 14 feet in width, and a retaining wall 600 feet by 6 feet.

Work on the Beechwood Road Bridge has been completed. Traffic is closed on Hanekamp street, from Jackson street to Allegany street. Washington street is closed at Hanekamp street.

Body of Fire Victim Arrives at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The body of Roy Neff, 35, son of Edward R. Neff, veteran merchant, was brought here today. Neff was suffocated in a fire at his New Hyde Park, N. Y., apartment.

In addition to his parents, widow and infant son, Neff is survived by a 17-year-old son of a previous marriage. Myles Neff, residing at Connellsville, Pa.

Nease Reelected Gun Club's Head

Randolph County Hunters Map '34 Plans.

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—S. E. Nease was reelected president of the Randolph County Rod and Gun Club at the annual meeting. Other officers are:

T. M. Cheek, acting director of the State Conservation Commission, complimented the organization for its activity in the conservation. E. E. Keenan, district game protector, also spoke.

Reports by club officers indicated much activity in 1933 in the propagation of fish and game and other conservation work, and an even more elaborate program for 1934 was outlined. Plans for the year include a membership campaign.

A partial report on the "varmint" killing contest, which will end February 28, showed the following kills: 79 foxes, 114 weasels, 10 wild cats, 29 minks, 2 eagles, 46 owls, 42 hawks, 19 wild house cats, 29 crows, 223 red squirrels and 57 chipmunks.

W. E. Kelly, of Selma, Dies.

Clifton Forge, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). W. E. Kelly, 85, of Selma, died yesterday. He is survived by his widow, seven daughters and one son.

West Virginia Asks Imports From Surrounding Dry States.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). The West Virginia State Senate today passed a resolution calling upon Congress to amend the interstate commerce laws to permit importation of liquor from neighboring dry States into West Virginia, and sent it to the House.

Attorney General Homer A. Holt ruled there is nothing in the State law to prevent such importation, but Federal Judge George W. McClintic has declared it forbidden under Federal laws.

Meanwhile the House of Delegates passed a bill permitting publication of liquor advertisements in the State.

A fight is expected tomorrow in the Senate on a bill to equalize the valuation of public utilities for tax and rate making purposes, when the finance committee is scheduled to vote on it. Senator A. B. Abbott (Democrat), of Fayette, today said the bill would be reported to the Senate regardless of how the committee votes. The bill, sponsored by Senator Stidell Brown (Democrat), Randolph, has been before the committee several weeks.

The House today approved and sent to the Senate a bill extending until March 1 the time for making returns and paying taxes upon gross incomes by business trades and callings, and gross proceeds of sales.

The House also passed a bill authorizing building and loan associations to organize a State savings and loan association with power to borrow Federal funds for its activities. The bill had already been approved by the Senate, but technical amendments sent it back.

The Huntington charter bill was passed by the House with amendments, sending it back to the Senate for further action. A bill, drawn by the PWA in Washington, clarifying technical steps for borrowing of Federal funds for a State university dormitory at Morgantown was passed by the House.

Hoarder

West Virginian Charged Under Gold Law.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). West Virginia's first alleged violator of the Federal antihoarding order on gold is under $500 bond at Huntington, awaiting action of the Federal grand jury in March.

Charles Williamson, a fur salesman, was arrested by Secret Service agents after they learned of an attempt to change $20 and $100 gold certificates.

Officers said Williamson had approximately $300 in gold left from an original total estimated at $1,000.

He entered a plea of guilty before United States Commissioner Heffley.

Mrs. Cora Gosney Buried.

Danville, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Cora May Gosney, who died Sunday after a long illness. She was a native of Casewell County, N. C. Her husband, J. D. Gosney, and seven children survive.

Tax Returns Due At Roanoke Office

Deadline Nears Also for Business Licenses.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). John M. Hart, commissioner of revenue, is urging citizens to file returns at once on personal property taxes which must be in his office before June 1. Forms for the reports have just been received.

Merchants and professional men also must obtain licenses to do business by February 1.

Every resident, male and female, 21 or over, is required to file a tax return, listing all personal property and giving the amount of annual income if it exceeds the tax exempt figures.

Held in Dice Killing.

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Charles Hairston, 22, Negro of East Martinsville, is in jail here pending a hearing in the death of Ernest Brown, 45, Negro of the same community. Brown was killed by a blow in dice game.

TWO HEADLINERS in one Great Company!

ONE leading product makes a company a great success. Two leaders make history!

But ever since it was first organized, the American Oil Company has been doing the unusual.

First came AMOCO-GAS—the original special motor fuel. All the ordinary premium gasolines you read about—or hear about—or have been using—are but imitations of AMOCO-GAS. For AMOCO-GAS made history almost two decades ago! It revolutionized two major industries—gasoline and automotive. It made possible today's high compression motor.

AMOCO-GAS costs less than regular gasoline or ordinary premium gasoline—on a mileage basis alone. Its amazing pick-up—power—riding luxury and driving ease—and other operating economies are yours gratis. They cost you nothing!

They next created Orange AMERICAN GAS—made with a pure petroleum base and the best gasoline selling at regular gas price.

It was the first "regular" to be colored—orange—to prevent substitution. Other gasolines are now also colored orange—but matching the color doesn't match the quality of Orange AMERICAN GAS.

Take your choice! For the lowest-cost-per-mile—AMOCO-GAS. For regular priced gasoline at its best—Orange AMERICAN GAS. They're both headliners in one great company—and each the best in its price class.

Pen Women Hear Authors Saturday

Publisher Among Guests for Breakfast.

When the National League of American Pen Women entertains with its annual "celebrity breakfast" at the Willard Hotel Saturday, it will have a distinguished publisher as one of the guests of honor.

He is Mr. Theodore von Ziekursch, whose magazine recently collaborated with the literary committee of the Chicago World's Fair in awarding $10,000 to Miss L. M. Alexander, of Baldwin, Kans., author of the prize-winning novel, "Candy," a Southern Negro novel.

Four outstanding women authors likewise will be honored at the breakfast.

They are Mrs. Helen Fuller Orton, whose latest book is, "Treasure in the Little Trunk," Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, whose new book, about Navajo Indians, is called "Mesa Land"; Miss Elizabeth Corbett, author of "Nice Long Evening," and Mrs. Irinka Skariatina, who wrote, "The First to Go Back."

Mrs. Orton will tell of her pleasure in writing for children; Mrs. Ickes will speak of the land she loves best, and Mrs. Skariatina will tell of the Russia of yesterday and today.

Other well-known authors on the "celebrity breakfast" program will be Valentine Williams, slated to talk on "Crime Fiction"; Evan J. David, who will discuss "Personalities I Have Met," and Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society. Marvin Gardiner, bass-barytone, will sing a group of songs.

Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, second National vice president, and Mrs. Theodore Tiller 2nd, social chairman, will be cohostesses with Mrs. Clara Keck Heflebower, National president, at the breakfast. Friends of the league, and those interested in the work of the Pen Women's organization, are invited to attend.

Man Whose Ballot Gave Vote To Women Faced a Whipping

Irate Folk Soon Cooled, However, Harry T. Burn Recalls Here.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Every election day, as thousands of women hurry through their breakfast dishes and rush to the polls and vote, a successful young lawyer sits quietly in his pleasant office in Sweetwater, Tenn., and contemplates this state of affairs with a good deal of satisfaction. It was this young man, Harry T. Burn, who, with one little word, decided whether the women of the United States should be given the privilege of the ballot. The little word was "yea." It was shouted by Mr. Burn when a roll call on the suffrage amendment was taken in the Tennessee House of Representatives in 1920. Thirty-five States already had ratified the amendment. Tennessee was the fateful thirty-sixth and the vote of Mr. Burn, 23-year-old "baby" of the House, was the one that decided the hotly contested issue.

"I've never regretted that I voted 'yes,'" said Mr. Burn yesterday morning in the law office of a friend in the Tower Building. He had hurried to Washington to appear before an NRA deputy administrator in behalf of a small hosiery mill in Niota, Tenn. The mill, incidentally, once belonged to the lawyer's family.

Mr. Burn laughed as he recalled the bitter fight that was waged for and against woman suffrage before the amendment came to a vote in Tennessee.

The days preceding the roll call were hectic ones for all the representatives. Lobbyists from distant States were chasing them up and down halls and threatening to crawl through the keyholes of their doors. But those days seemed calm and peaceful to Mr. Burn in comparison with the perilous times that followed.

Tar-and-Feather Threat.

Tennessee men take their politics and their women folk seriously and when the conservative ones considered the terrifying fact that, through the bumptiousness of the youngest member of the House, their wives, mothers, sisters and daughters would actually strut boldly to the polls along with the male voters, their hot Southern blood reached fever heat. Mr. Burn was threatened with tar and feathers, ancient eggs and horsewhippings. Things became so hazardous that a bodyguard was necessary.

"I arranged with my cousin, a husky blacksmith, to follow me everywhere I went," he said. "He was always at my shoulder. No, he didn't actually have to fight off any of my assailants, but there were a good many times when it looked as if he would have to tap somebody with an anvil. The thing that worried me more than tar and feathers and horsewhippings was the fact that I was running for my second term in the Legislature. And the strange part of it was that many of the women fought me. You see, we have a great many people in Tennessee who belong to a church that forbids women taking an active part in public life. Then there were other women, not members of that church, who thought that politics was nothing but a cesspool and that I had helped to shove them into it. As if that weren't enough, I came from one of the most conservative districts in the State."

Voted "Yea" the First Time.

At the time he answered "yea" to the roll call on the suffrage bill he was brought to the attention of people from coast to coast by newspaper articles telling of the battle in Tennessee.

"And every newspaper had the story wrong," he explained. "They all said that I changed my vote. I did nothing of the kind. I had known for several days that when the resolution was presented I would vote for it. But members of the House who were against it wanted it tabled so that more consideration could be given to it. I, too, thought that more consideration would be a good thing, so I voted "yes" on the motion to table. Since the others who wanted to delay the introduction of the resolution were against suffrage, people jumped to the conclusion that I was also. That's why they were so excited when I voted in favor of the suffrage amendment, after the motion to table had ended in a tie and the Speaker of the House had ordered the roll call to be taken."

Mr. Burn believes that woman suffrage will never prove the beautiful blessing to humanity that its adherents prophesized. Neither will it wreck the Government as its opponents predicted.

"But there is one thing sure," said the young lawyer, "Candidates for public office are forced to be more scrupulous in their morals and principles, now that women have the vote."

Sissy Wax Models Arouse Fascist Ire

Officers Protest Unmanly Mannikins in Windows.

Rome, Jan. 23 (AP).—"Effeminate" wax models for displaying uniforms in military tailor shops aroused the ire today of Fascist newspapers and officers who demanded that the "sissified" figures be replaced by "more military and less endearing clotheshorses."

One officer, writing in the newspaper Tribuna, said that "shop windows show officers with pomaded hair, feminine figures, eyebrows and eyelashes of a Garbo and lovely carmined fingernails."

He declared this "is an insufferable reflection" upon the dignity, austerity, and rugged discipline of the nation's defenders.

New Silhouette Skirt Designed On Slim Lines

Many Variations Shown in Paris, But None Have Fullness.

The spring suit silhouette, according to a recent opening of one of the important, Paris dressmaking houses, is slim and straight with very little elaboration anywhere. Skirts are just full enough to permit comfortable walking. Sometimes they are fitted with numerous gores, sometimes they are in simple wrap-around styles, and sometimes they are slightly circular. But never is there any great amount of fullness. Pleats are used so sparingly that they can not be given serious consideration as a style point. Many of the designers, however, seem to be leaning in the direction of pleats for tailored dresses and sports clothes. This is quite as it should be. Unless the material is exceedingly light in weight, this method of introducing fullness is not a happy choice for suits.

Jackets are in a variety of lengths from just below the waist to just above the knee. The mess jacket of last year failed to put in an appearance at this particular Paris opening. The mannish type, with severely tailored lapels and large patch pockets, was shown in several versions, including belted as well as unbelted styles. But smartest of all are those that extend to the hips and are nipped in at the waist, giving the wearer a trim, slender silhouette. These are usually without belts or pockets, but rely upon their collars for interest. Ascot ties are still in vogue, but just as jaunty and even newer are scarfs that are attached to the jackets and cross softly in front, fastening far out on the shoulders with huge buttons or large clips. These crossed scarfs have a butterfly effect that is decidedly youthful and springlike.

Gray flannel is very good for these new spring suits. Cream and beige are also favored colors, especially in soft silk and wool mixtures.

Spring Hat Trimming Makes Move to Rear

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Tiny fruit clusters are the latest in trimming for spring hats. These are frequently placed at the back, as are bows, flower clusters and other trimmings. This, designers say, is partly to go with the blown-to-the-back silhouette in clothes, and partly because new coiffures are smooth in front and have a fluff of curls at the back.

Bandeaux are shown by a few designers in quaint or very young hats. One of these models has an off-the-face line and a bandeau of ribbon. Another is a canotier with the addition of a bandeau of the same straw as the hat. Straws are not yet braving the wintry rains, but alpaca, fuzzy wool and burlap straw appear in hats actually on the head.

"Golden West" Girl Reviews Art Triumph

Mrs. Montague, Glorified by Harrison Fisher, Mourns Him.

Hollywood, Jan. 23 (AP).—Her beauty undimmed by the passing of more than two decades, Harrison Fisher's original "Girl of the Golden West" lives modestly here, surrounded by countless mementoes of other years.

She is Mrs. Frederick Montague, a widow since 1919. When she first met the noted artist, 24 years ago, in a San Francisco hotel, she was Maurine Rasmussen.

As New York paid final tribute to Fisher, who died there last Friday, Mrs. Montague looked back over the years since as a timid girl of 17 she stepped up to the artist in the San Francisco Hotel and stammered:

"Do you think I could ever pose for you, Mr. Fisher?"

A Momentous Choice.

The artist looked at the girl, who was to be the future inspiration and model for some of his most striking work.

"You are going to pose for me now," he said, leading the girl to a chair in a quiet spot of the lobby.

When the artist finished the sketch, made on the back of an envelope, he said:

"I want you to come to New York. You are my new Harrison Fisher girl."

Since that interview in 1910 Mrs. Montague has smiled in pictures, from a million magazine covers, post cards and placards.

Struggle for Recognition.

"Life, during the time I posed for him was idealistic," Mrs. Montague recalled. "He told me of his struggle for a niche in the artist world. He told me how a struggling young actress, Laura Nelson Hall, used to pose for him free. She was really the original Fisher girl."

From Fisher's studio, Mrs. Montague, as Miss Rasmussen, went on the stage. In 1917 she came to Los Angeles. In 1924 she wrote the book, lyrics and music of a play, "The Caliph," produced both in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

In 1928 Fisher came to Los Angeles. He asked to see his former model "for old time's sake."

"We sat and talked for a while of all that happened," Mrs. Montague said. "And then his pencil fell to paper and he began to sketch me again—not as he was actually seeing me—but as the girl he remembered."

Johns Hopkins Professor Fans Campaign at Meeting.

The Potomac may have been an important factor in the commerce and traffic of this Nation in its early days, but it's just "a dirty river" to clubwomen of Washington.

They'd like to clean it up. So, too, would the District Board of Commissioners, according to Dr. John H. Gregory, Johns Hopkins University professor.

Appearing at a meeting of the District Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday, Dr. Gregory told them some of his problems. He is a member of a board appointed by local Commissioners to investigate the possibilities of a sewage disposal plant for the District.

"Washington is not alone with her dirty river," he told them in effect. "Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago each has a similar problem, but they have taken steps to improve conditions. It is eminently fitting that the Nation's Capital should do likewise."

The only solution, it appears, is to build a plant which would adequately handle the situation for years to come.

Disapprove Pay Cuts.

While it is not on record that the clubwomen rebuked Congress, they turned scrutinizing eyes in its direction at the meeting and unanimously adopted a couple of admonitory resolutions.

"Since economic conditions require an increase in purchasing power and since reduction of wages is no longer consistent with the national recovery program, Congress is urged to discontinue wage cuts," was the purport of one.

"Since it paralyzes the very type of education making the greatest contribution to permanent social and economic readjustment," Congress was urged "to eliminate the 25 per cent cut in the appropriations for vocational education," in another resolution.

Reenactment of the Federal George-Reed law for home economics and agricultural education was also indorsed in the latter's resolution.

Urge Youths' Clubs.

Broader use of public school buildings and equipment by the general public and establishment of clubs for young people was indorsed at the meeting. It was also demanded that Congress appropriate funds sufficient for establishing such clubs for young people.

Progress is being made in the night schools and the Americanization School of Washington, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, public school superintendent, told the club women. He outlined plans for additional adult education facilities.

Hope that the next 30 years will bring some answer to the need for vocational education among youth was expressed by Dr. H. L. Dennis, executive secretary of the American Vocational Education Association.

"A better comprehension of the whole make-up of youth should be developed," he said. "The United States has the second largest penitentiary in the world, two-fifths of whose inmates are between the ages of 16 and 25.

Help Unemployed.

"If we can spend $400 a year on a boy after he is in the penitentiary, why can we not spend at least half that amount to keep him out? Furthermore, we must do something for the mass of adolescents who are out of employment. Our educational program will at least help."

That Vassar College is sponsoring a special educational project "for helping women to find 'the satisfying life,'" was told by Mrs. Fay M. Stockwell, field secretary of the Euthenics Institute of Vassar.

The Bureau of Substitute Homesteads is working on an educational project for homeless men and women, club women were informed by C. L. Pickett, representative of the bureau.

Miss Bellows Engaged To Mr. P. W. Pillsbury

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Adams Bellows, of 2101 Connecticut avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Bellows, to Mr. Phillip Winston Pillsbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stinson Pillsbury, of Minneapolis.

Soap Making Revived In New CWS Project

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 23 (AP).—The art of soap-making, long dormant, has been restored to something of its old place in domestic science by women workers employed in Springfield by the Civil Works Service.

Directed by Mrs. Permelia Haller, 70, veteran soap-maker, who volunteered her services, from 15 to 40 women labor daily at the task, producing old-fashioned lye soap in the largest quantities the community has seen in years. Since the Government provides only wages for CWS projects, women directors raised funds for lye with a benefit show and enlisted assistance of school children in collecting grease.

Plucked Brow Fad Dies Out In Hollywood

Natural Line Accepted as Giving Greater Loveliness.

The dictum of nature is once more being obeyed in the matter of eyebrow lines, according to word from Hollywood.

The pendulum of fashion in make-up has definitely swung away from the plucked, surprised, frankly artificial and exaggeratedly thin eyebrow arch, to a heavier, more natural and infinitely more becoming line. And it is a blessing. Only the prettiest faces, which could very well have let good enough alone, were ever justified in the experiment in the first place.

But the word went out, a few years ago, "Off with eyebrows," and off they came, regardless of effect. But today, 80 per cent of America's beauty leaders—and it is safe to assume that the fair faces of Hollywood may be thus regarded—are cultivating their natural eyebrow lines as zealously as they are preserving slim figures and flawless complexions.

The only plucking which beauty exponents advocate or tolerate today is that which eradicates the wild hairs that spoil the pure outlines of the eyebrow given by nature.

There is an "ugly duckling" period ahead for those who have clung to the hair-line eyebrow up to now, but it can be met with a degree of assurance by observing a few common sense rules. The only danger lies in trying to effect the change too quickly. It must be done gradually. Otherwise the brow may resemble a miniature brush during the transition period. Pluck as little as possible, but keep the new growth within a definitely circumscribed arc. Every night before retiring brush the brows carefully, using warm olive oil or vaseline. After working the oil in, brush the brows straight up. Then brush them outward toward the temple, coaxing into place the new growth, so that it will be smooth and glossy and tractable. When the new "crop" has attained maturity, should you desire an even broader brow, proceed in the same manner on a wider scale.

Woman Gets Party Office.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Mrs. Lora Coleman has been appointed vice chairman of the city Democratic committee. Ward chairmen are Ray O. Lawson, Jefferson; James F. MacTier, Highland; J. H. Foster, Melrose; Mrs. Viola M. Fawcett, Raleigh Court, and Mrs. Mary J. German, Kimball.

Travel and Diplomatic Pomp Heritage of Her Childhood

Wife of Brazilian Ambassador, Daughter of Mexican Envoy Finds Life Spent in Capitals of the World Inspiring and Rich in Experiences.

The life of the diplomat's wife is full and interesting; it holds great possibilities for happiness; it is richer in opportunity, perhaps, than many another walk of life. But in the last analysis, the happiness to be found there depends in large measure upon the personality and resourcefulness of the woman herself.

This is the third article in a series of personality sketches of women in the foreign diplomatic corps in the Nation's Capital.

By Elizabeth Young.

Although she was born to the glamour of the diplomat's life and has never known any other, Mme. de Lima e Silva is convinced she would have been equally happy in a country cottage.

Animals and flowers and every living thing in nature are quite as productive of happiness to the wife of Brazil's Ambassador to the United States as all those brilliant diversions which the ingenuity of man place at the disposal of the fortunately born.

When interviewed, titian-haired Mme. de Lima had just come in, gay and glowing, from an eight miles' walk on one of the coldest days in Washington's history. The dogs had gone along.

Of dogs she has an amusing and beloved collection: Juanita, the grandmother, a cross-breed in whom the Mexican Chihuahua strain predominates; Juanita's son, Cap, of the overgrown fox terrier type, so named because his infancy was energetically devoted to worrying headgear; and Cap's two sons, Perricon and Borrego, born of a little yellow, woolly haired mother picked up off the streets of Mexico City after she had been stabbed and nursed back to health in the De Lima home, when Ambassador de Lima was ambassador to that country. The little mother later died.

"Borrego in Spanish means 'lamb,' and Borrego is lamb-like in coat as well as disposition," said Mme. de Lima. "Perricon is like his father, but larger. Would you like to see them?"

Introducing Juanita.

Juanita was summoned to the drawing room, coming downstairs with a ladylike pitter-patter to halt at the door and bark a hesitating inquiry as to what was wanted of her. Introductions over, she wriggled ingratiatingly into Mme. de Lima's arms. Borrego followed decorously, scarcely wagging his tail at all, to stand at attention. The others were visited in Mme. de Lima's rooms above, where each has his little trundle bed.

"Juanita adopted us to look out for her and her descendants," Mme. de Lima smiled. "Before her arrival, which I must admit was uninvited and unencouraged, we had a Pekingese—that afterward died—brought back from abroad to Mexico City. In the garden was a basket for the cats to sleep in. One day Juanita came in from the streets and climbed into the basket. I shooed her away. Days later, she came back to stand outside the wall, and the Ambassador shooed her away again. But she returned a third time, to present us very shortly with a son. Her persistence and her touching dependence gained her point, and she's been with us ever since.

"We acquired Perricon's and Borrego's mother in much the same way. My younger brother was staying with us. He went out one evening, taking the car, and returned some time afterward in a great state of agitation and distress.

Another Addition.

"'I've just done the most terrible thing,' he said. I pictured every imaginable disaster. I thought he must have had an accident with the car. When he finally confessed, it was that he had picked up and brought back a little yellow dog he found in the street, stabbed. By the time her wounds were healed she was an accepted member of the household."

Mme. de Lima was born in Rome, one of four children of the Mexican diplomat, the late Senor Miguel Covarrubias—uncle of the celebrated caricaturist, Covarrubias. Her mother had been Rose Choppin, of New Orleans.

When she was 2 her father was made First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy in Great Britain, and the family went to London to live. Much of her youth was spent in London, where her father presented his credentials seven times. Here she met and married Senor R. de Lima e Silva, then First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy.

She lived thereafter in Ecuador, Bolivia, Poland, Belgium, Switzerland, Norway, Japan and Mexico and was stationed at the Brazilian Embassy in the latter country five years before coming to Washington. She confesses to loving Mexico dearly, although she delights in Washington and its sometimes biting winter climate.

Likes Mexican Dishes.

She has a particular fondness for typically Mexican dishes, a taste she thinks she must have inherited, since she had little opportunity to cultivate it during her growing-up years.

Brazil, her husband's country, which she has twice visited, once four years ago, and again for five months just before coming to Washington, is scenically one of the most majestic countries she has ever known.

"The mountains in Brazil," said Mme. de Lima, "are so majestic they take away the breath."

Women she has found much the same in every country, so far as culture and personality are concerned, although she believes American and English women differ from other nationalities in their spirit of economic and political enterprise.

"It's the way they've been brought up, no? Side by side with and as independent as their brothers. In no other countries does one see women who are ministers, Cabinet members, parliamentarians; although I think the whole world is tending in that direction. In Mexico, women are expressing themselves a little more, in writing, in nursing; some in looking after their country places.

Easy to Be Happy.

"In days past if the head of a Mexican family died leaving his widow with a vast estate of lands, perhaps she just sat down and let it all go—no? Now she takes charge of it like a good business man."

As for the life of an ambassador's wife, Mme. de Lima says:

"I have never known any other life. For me I never imagined any other kind of life. It is like eating, drinking, sleeping. One simply lives it. It is not very difficult, after all.

"I love the country, swimming, lots of flowers, lots of animals. The past two summers we have spent on the North Shore, where the bathing is wonderful. We have had the same house two years. Now it is just like going home, knowing every corner, every piece of furniture.

"I could be contented to live the year round in the county. It would be no sacrifice. One can be happy anywhere when one realizes that happiness consists of seeing and doing things for oneself."

Read in tomorrow's Post the story of the Ambassador's wife who is the author of two successful books, and hopes to write at least one more.

Pastors Plan Institute.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Ministers of this city and county will hold an institute this spring, the Ministerial Association decided yesterday. Ministers in adjoining counties will be invited.

Arab Princess Offers Tribute To Suffragists

Wreath Placed on Statue in Capital With Plea for Feminists.

Homage was paid the memory of pioneer women suffragists of America yesterday afternoon by an Arabian feminist, Mme. Homada Bey.

Mme. Homada Bey, a princess of the Druses, here to attend the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, headed a pilgrimage to the suffragists' statue in the crypt at the Capitol, and placed at the feet of the heroic marble figures of Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton a spray of gladioli.

Speaking in Arabic—which was translated to her audience by her brother, Prince Homada—the princess paid tribute to "the lives of these great pioneer women of America who have been an inspiration to the women of the East in working not only for education and social emancipation, but for full political and econonomic emancipation."

She said she spoke for the General Alliance of Oriental Women, of which she is president. She is also founder and president of the Arabian Women's Academy, the Syrian Women's Alliance, and the Arabian Women's Alliance.

She is the daughter of the Grand Sheik Akl of the Druses, a Mohammedan sect, who is ruler of a principality in South Lebanon.

"But women can not be free if their country is not free," the princess said. "While we are working for our own freedom, we are working with our men for the freedom of our country. The World War was caused by the desire of the great nations of the world to control and exploit the weaker nations. Every future war will have its roots in the same source."

Women of the world must work for individual freedom, so that together they may present a united front in demanding world justice and peace, she said. The princess was introduced by Representative Louis Ludlow, of Indiana, sponsor of the equal rights amendment now pending in the House. The delegation of nearly 100 persons included Miss Nina Strandberg, Swedish feminist, now lecturing in America.

New Corsets Attain Smoothness of Line By Omitting Bulky Seams and Fasteners

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 24.—It's every smart woman's aim to have a fashionable figure. And today that means one which is graceful and supple . . . neither too flat nor too fat. With a rounded and definitely marked bust, a distinct waistline and hips which are smooth but still obviously hips.

Because of this aim things are happening fast to foundation garments . . . those girdles, brassiers and all-in-one combinations which are the most important helps to her getting that kind of figure.

Brassieres and the all-in-ones (which include brassieres) are more than ever of the uplift type, designed to raise and mould the breasts rather than flatten them as used to be the ideal.

Bulges Eliminated.

But the big effort is being put forth to elminate all bulges and creases, not only from the figure but from the corsets themselves.

Patou has even gone so far as not to allow his mannikins to year garters lest there be a slight bump on the costume where garter and stocking join.

Corset makers consider the garter problem important, too, and are bending their energies to making them so flat and inconspicuous that they are not perceptible under the lightest frock.

But even more effort is being supplied to making the corset bodies perfectly smooth.

In some of them seams are being entirely eliminated, with two-way stretch and clever bias-cut materials applying the pull on the figure where it needs flattening and smoothing.

Minus Fastenings.

The all-in-one illustrated has no fastening. Made of silk and elastic it is cut so that it can easily be stepped into. And when on, it is found that the two fabrics are so combined that just the right amount of pull is exerted in just the right places to give those smoothly flowing lines which characterize the smart figure.

The girdle illustrated is fastenless, too, made entirely of two-way stretch fabric which has sufficient control for the youthful figure.

Corsets of the types described are available in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

Three American Women Hailed As Queens of Fashion World

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Three New York women, including the society woman who was named by Parisian dressmakers as the best-dressed woman in America, were named today by Orry-Kelly, noted Hollywood designer, as among the finest costumed women in this country.

Mrs. Harrison Williams, chosen by the French costumers as the best-dressed American, was among the three. The others were Doris Duke, reputedly the Nation's richest heiress, and Miss Whitney Bourne.

Mrs. Williams, a daughter of Kentucky, is the wife of a public utilities magnate. She has a flair for decorating her own homes, and her taste in clothes evokes comment on two continents.

Doris Duke, heiress to the Duke tobacco fortune, recently came into actual control of her millions. She travels widely and is known for her beauty. She is the only rival, among immensely wealth American heiresses, of Barbara Hutton Mdivani.

Whitney Bourne is the stepdaughter of Harvey D. Gibson, banker. She has lived in New York and abroad, and has theatrical ambitions.

Swimming Suits Of New Fabric Are Sunproof

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Twenty or thirty years ago when cold and rainy January rolled around and our grandmothers prepared for Southern cruising or boarding the train for warmer climes they gave but scant thought to bathing suits. If they shopped for them at all they bought conservative skirts and blouses, usually of heavy sateen, or voluminous bloomer suits—if they were daring.

But the years brought changes. The demand for new style swimming suits arose and designers and manufacturers the world over heeded the public call and created suits which were adaptable to the water, and not merely to land. Every year saw some innovation. From backless suits we graduated to the brassiere and trunks, where we seem to have stopped for the time being.

Having gone the limit in creating styles, the manufacturers have turned their minds to new fabrics. One of the best known bathing suit houses has recently put some suits on the market made of a brand-new material.

This fabric has the sheen and richness of silk and the durability of highest grade wool. Before it left the factories it was tested in the sun to see how well it held colors. The results were highly satisfactory. It was tested in salt water, with the same result, and given stretching tests which had no effect on the shape.

Guaranteed against sun, salt water, and stretching—could we ask more of any suit? Only that it fit in such a fashion that it in no way obscures or deforms the natural curves.

These suits come in two styles, the very formal and the bra-lift, and in four colors, riff red, bahama blue, gold and black.

Large 24-inch souvenir handkerchiefs with a large center square devoted to a map of Washington and a wide border of pictures of old Washington landmarks are among the newest things to appear in a local gift shop.

As the proprietress showed them to us she explained how many uses they have. They're large enough to cover a card table, or be used for a luncheon cover. For the boys' room or the den they make novel and attractive "tapestries." They may be folded and used around the neck as either kerchief or scarf; or with a bit of manipulation can be made into unusual aprons.

Housewives always interested in the "different" should be glad to hear that here is something which can tax their ingenuity in several directions.

Food served in attractive dishes always tastes better than food served in a commoplace manner. And, of course, food served in dishes which were constructed for that particular viand can't help but gain in flavor.

Asparagus, for instance. Housewives who pour it onto a platter, or dump it into a bowl, can hardly expect the family to appreciate it as though it were carefully arranged in bunches laid temptingly in a silver dish.

A Connecticut avenue shop has an asparagus dish which comes complete with a silver rack and an attached butter bowl. The vegetable laid across the rack is drained of surplus water. When it is served the melted butter can be liberally poured upon it.

When the tray and rack are removed, the lovely silver dish may be used for serving any kind of vegetables.

No matter how clear a skin may be of pimples and blemishes, if it has the coarse look resulting from large pores it keeps beauty from a countenance. A Grecian nose, exotic eyes and rosebud lips avail little when the skin can't bear a close-up.

But we've no reason to worry. Science in her usual ready way can do wonders for us. A well-known beautician puts out a preparation which contracts distended pores, corrects their laxness and refines the coarsest skins. It is a greaseless astringent suited to dry and oily skins alike. The process which makes it successful is simple. By toning and invigorating the cells it reduces the pores by reviving their normal health.

A chafing dish is one of the most convenient things we can have around. Ask those who own them!

When we come in late Sunday evening, it's fine to throw together an omelet, heat up a rarebit, or prepare game dishes in a brief time with no trouble.

Or for impromptu luncheons, they can be placed on the table within reach of the hostess, who can heat up her repast and serve it in this delightfully informal manner.

A local electric shop has some which are chromium plated and trimmed in either red or black arinite. Decorative as well as useful!

Oriental Women Freed of Traditional Shackles

Mme. Homada Bey Tells of Advances Toward Modern Regime.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

Oriental women no longer walk the streets with veiled faces and downcast eyes. They how wear the latest Parisian fashions and turn their faces boldly to the sun. For feminist leaders in the Orient have demanded full emancipation for their women in every walk of life; and the removal of their veils is a symbol both of their courage and their victory.

"We have done these things not without a great deal of difficulty," Mme. Homada Bey, of Syria, leader of educational, political and social development of women in the East, told this reporter yesterday. Mme. Bey, who is in this country attending the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, is the guest of the National Woman's Party in Washington.

"Even in my own family I had trouble when I began my work," Mme. Bey said. "They felt that it was not fitting for a princess to lead this movement. But at last I made them understand.

"You see, I come from a family of temporal and religious leaders, and, of course, I was educated in schools and colleges. And then like a light it came to me that I must help the women in my country obtain freedom and equal education with the men."

Husband Financed Work.

Mme. Homeda Bey told how she persuaded her husband to cooperate in her work. At first he objected, but at length became so interested that he not only gave her his permission to continue it, but gave her the money to finance her projects.

"And when he was dying," the princess said, "he called the members of his family to him and said: 'Help her with her work. It is right that she should do this.' Since that time I have devoted my entire life and fortune to liberating the women of my country.

"The first work I did was before the World War, and it was mostly in charities. I saw the need of organizing our women for furthering their education and social welfare.

"I began by creating three national organizations, in Syria, Persia and Arabia. I persuaded the queens of each of these countries to act as presidents of their national organizations. In that way we gained the confidence of the people. When later the three national organizations were united in the General Oriental Women's Alliance, the queens continued to act as honorary presidents.

How Veils Were Removed.

"The hardest fight I had was in getting the veils off the women. Many of the fanatic people threatened war if I did not stop my campaign against them. Finally I got a copy of the Koran and showed that Mahomet had never bidden the women to wear veils. It was a custom begun by men who were jealous of their wives and didn't want other men to look at them.

"I appeared before King Feisal of Irak with my face unveiled, and said to the people assembled in his presence. 'Look at me. This is the way the wife and daughters of the prophet dressed. He never bade us wear veils.' That was five years ago. Now almost all the women in my country are unveiled.

"One thing that may surprise you is that the rulers of our countries are most sympathetic with the movement, and are kind and hospitable to us.

"When we went to Persia the Shah himself received us. That was the first time women had ever been received in his court. For even when the Queen of Afghanistan came to his country he refused to receive her. He ordered us to come to the opening of Parliament and came down off his throne to extend his hand and wish us success.

Polygamy in Decline.

"Polygamy is almost unknown in the Orient today. Some shieks in the far places of the desert still have harems, but for the most part harems are past history. The religious leaders are largely responsible for the change. They try to teach the people that the prophet did not countenance polygamy, and that his words had been falsely interpreted by those who desired that way of living."

Mme. Bey said that women in the Orient do not yet vote.

"I would like you to understand that I am not trying to change all the traditions of my country. There are many beautiful things there which we want to preserve. We are trying to combine the best in the East and the best in the West. We feel that when this is accomplished our women can do much good in both national and international affairs."

Mme. Homada Bey, feminist leader in the Orient who is visiting in Washington, appears at right in the costume worn by Eastern women at the time of Mahomet. The castle is Mme. Homada Bey's ancestral home. Her people, temporal and religious rulers of the Druses, have lived there for more than 800 years.

Beauty Created Out of Rags On Rug Weaver's Magic Loom

Skill of Past Generation Survives in Shop of W. H. Kephart.

By Marion Butler.

As easily as a magician pulling rabbits out of a hat, William H. Kephart, of Herndon, Va., conjures beauty from bundles of old rags. Under his skillful fingers old dresses, curtains, even silk ties, torn into strips and tied together, are woven into the picturesque rag carpets of a century ago.

Kephart, 77 years old, has been weaving carpets ever since he was a boy of 15. He uses the same old-fashioned hand loom that his father used in Civil War times. It is known to be over 125 years old, constructed in Loudoun County in the days when there was a loom at every farmstead.

"Nothing has been done to the loom in all these years," Kephart says with pride, "except to repair parts where the wood has rotted and to change the headles from the old string kind to the more convenient metal ones."

Old Style Cloth Superior.

Reared in a family of weavers, Kephart first learned the old art by spending his boyhood days in the hand-loom woolen factory of his father at Beallsville, Md. In those days, a loom factory's only crude piece of power machinery was a water wheel, 3 feet ide and 19 feet in diameter.

"Work was slow," Kephart recalls, "but mighty fine. So tightly and evenly woven was the old-time cloth that it lasted a good deal longer than the machine-made stuff of today."

During the Civil War, Kephart's family moved to Loudoun County. He still remembers vividly crossing the Potomac at Lovettsville. On the Virginia side of the river, fields were strewn with bodies of slain cavalry horses, around which the carriages could thread a way only with great difficulty.

In Virginia, Kephart's father built the once-famous Rock Bridge Woolen Mills, near Lincoln. These were burned in the last days of the war by the Federal forces, but were built up soon afterward and equipped with the latest loom machinery developed at that time. Kephart worked in these mills and later in weaving mills at Mt. Gilead.

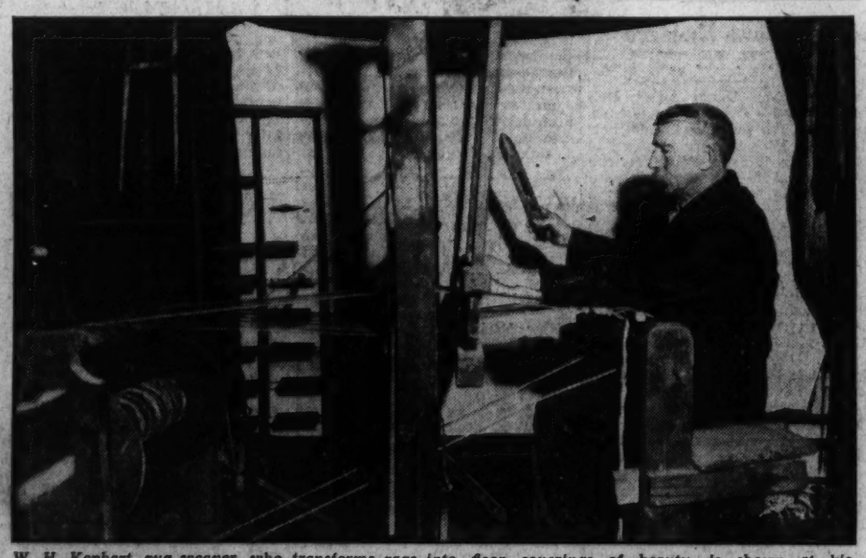
Rug Styles Change.

Though he can weave on any kind of a loom from hand to machine-run ones, Kephart prefers the old-fashioned carpet loom that has been handed down in his family as an heirloom. He weaves rugs on it from 12 to 40 inches in width and any length desired. It takes 3 pounds of rags to turn out a 3-yard rug on its stanch wooden frame.

Styles in rugs change swiftly, Kephart maintains. Forty years ago he used to make carpets 30 yards long. Housewives used them to cover stairways, tacking them carefully over every step. Silk rugs, too, were quite the thing, made out of the voluminous-skirted gayly colored ball gowns of the nineties. Nowadays, rugs just as lovely can be fashioned from discarded silk stockings, mufflers and brightly patterned scarfs. He is making more of these all the time, and believes hand-woven rag carpets are regaining their popularity of the last century.

Asked how many yards of carpet he has woven on his loom, Kephart just shakes his head:

"It's not yards any more," he smiles, "it's miles!"



W. H. Kephart, rug weaver, who transforms rags into floor coverings of beauty, is shown at his antique carpet loom at his home in Herndon, Va.

Horseradish Still Teams With Beef

Beef and horseradish, though an old, old combination, is still a popular one. The piquant, spicy flavor of the horseradish seems to add just the needed tang to the savory flavor of the beef.

Even though the combination is old, the ways of combining may be new. Here are the ones which you may not have tried, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist.

Horseradish Jelly (for Roast Beef).

3¼ cups sugar
½ cup horseradish
½ cup vinegar
½ cup commercial pectin

Measure the sugar, horseradish and vinegar into a large saucepan and mix thoroughly until the sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil, then at once add the pectin, stirring constantly. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil for one-half minute. Remove from fire, skim, and pour quickly into jelly glasses. When firm, unmold and serve with roast beef.

Pot Roast of Beef With Horseradish Sauce.

4 pounds beef pot roast
1 small bottle horseradish
Salt
Pepper

Brown meat well on all sides in a kettle containing melted suet or lard. Season with salt and pepper. Drain the liquid from the horseradish and pour over the pot roast. Cover closely, reduce the temperature and simmer gently until done. Turn the meat two or three times so that it will all be nicely flavored with the horseradish. Thicken the liquid in the kettle. This gravy will be a really delicious horseradish sauce.

Women Democrats Plan Spelling Bee

A spelling bee will follow the regular fortnightly dinner of the Woman's National Democratic Club Friday night at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue.

Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, president of the club, has chosen a group of "best spellers" to compete. Among the women who have agreed to spell are Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. George M. Eckels, Mrs. M. Szmczak, Mrs. Lloyd Fletcher, Mrs. Henry H. Clement and Miss Eleanor Connolly.

Mr. Edward Keating, editor of Labor, has selected a group of men of National prominence who will endeavor to teach the ladies that it requires masculine intelligence to master the spelling book. Members may volunteer to join the contestants.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 12 noon to 1:30 p. m. and from 2 to 4 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 10:45 to 11:45 a. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m.

If you were born on January 24, you are blessed with a forceful character, and a born leader. You easily dominate other people, so you have the essential qualifications to make a successful executive. You have a great deal of initiation, and are inclined to be impatient with others lacking this excellent trait. You are almost uncanny in being able to anticipate conditions and the results they may bring. Your popularity is due to the confidence you inspire in those with whom you are thrown in close contact. You will never allow your business to interfere with your home life. You can forgive most any fault, except untruthfulness. You have, and expect to possess, high ideals.

The child born on January 24 has been endowed with a wonderful disposition. Each passing year will bring out marvelous traits of character. It will develop a very versatile mind. You should plan its education thoughtfully. Be careful you do not let yourself, or others, make too much of a fuss over this child, thus causing it to become egotistical. Just as soon as it is old enough, encourage it to take an interest in religion, and this you can do by seeing it is regular in its attendance at some Sunday school.

The woman born on January 24 will be more content if she follows a career. You are so constituted you can at the same time successfully adjust yourself to married life without it interfering. You are ambitious, but must curb the tendency to be impatient. Success will crown your efforts.

The man born on January 24 is predisposed to be very serious and studious. You do not understand people of a more frivolous disposition, and show too plainly that they annoy you. If you desire to succeed, you must make the effort to adjust yourself to the varied peculiarities common to mankind. It may be well for you to remember youth must have its fling.

People born on January 24 will get a great deal of happiness out of life if they will engage in charitable enterprises. It might be well for you to recall the old saying: "Charity begins at home." Do not let the desire to see your name in print, or some other form of cheap publicity, influence your giving. Many times needy cases, unknown to the world at large, are more worthy of your attention. People born on January 24 usually are rewarded as leaders in their communities, and can exercise a tremendous amount of influence for good.

Successful people born on January 24:

Henry Barnard, educator.
Henry J. Raymond, journalist.
Joseph W. Drexel, banker and philanthropist.
Joseph H. Choate, lawyer.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Little Girls' Bedtime.

Little girls just turned eleven
Should go to bed at half-past seven,
But generally they incline
To staying up till half-past nine.
The dreadfullest of every dread time
To lovely little girls is bedtime.

At evening Janet's strength will rally
To find some way to dilly-dally.
Her active little mind produces
Innumerable strange excuses
Designed in one way or another
To get an extra hour from mother.

Sleeping to Janet seems like madness.
Unwearied yet by care or grieving
She hates the very thought of leaving
The earth for just a single minute,
So much there is that's lovely in it.

Though little girls just turned eleven
Should go to bed at half-past seven
I find they generally incline
To staying up till half-past nine,
Which proves that nothing drab or dreary
Has spoiled their lives or made them weary.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Seized by a band of masked men as he motors toward London from a visit in rural England, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, home secretary, is told he will be put to death unless he grants a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be hanged the next morning for the murder of one of his wife's friends. Rossiter refuses, is placed on an improvised gallows and—a messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is waiting at the home secretary's London residence, eager to tell the true story behind the slaying.

Rossiter agrees to grant a reprieve to Brandt if the woman's story implies justification in the shooting. The mysterious band releases him. At London, Mrs. Brandt tells him that her husband killed Gervase Benham in a fit of jealous anger. Finding his suspicions unjustified Brandt demanded that his wife preserve silence to shield herself.

Sir Humphrey Rossiter tells Mrs. Brandt he will grant a reprieve. She departs and the home secretary picks up his telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. Then, overwrought with the events of the night, he faints. When he regains consciousness it is broad daylight. He asks about Brandt and learns the man he had sought to save had been hanged at 8 o'clock that morning. Weeks later Rossiter visits Mrs. Brandt. She voices the conviction that her husband was insane and did not want to live. She remarks that she still holds Rossiter in high regard as a friend.

He smiled.

"What a slave driver you are!" he remarked. "I was rather thinking that I ought to resign my post and come to Cannes with you!"

"You will do nothing of the sort," she admonished him. "I have remained an honest woman through many temptations, and when I go to Cannes with you or any other man I am going as his wife. All the same, I am in favor of a holiday for you later on. You need it, and Cannes is always there."

"I felt so when I got up this morning," he confessed. "This is actually my first excursion into the outside world, and though I wanted to see you so much I rather dreaded it. I see now that I was foolish. Although I have found you wickedly obstinate I have also found you the most wonderful tonic in the world. I am going to send my doctor packing and get back into harness again. When can we have dinner together?"

She considered the matter for a moment, sipping her cocktail.

"Can it be the day after tomorrow?" she suggested. "I am always lonely on a Sunday night. Not a restaurant, of course, but you and I alone. Here or at your house?"

Dinner Engagement.

"At my house," he said, "at 8 o'clock—earlier if you like."

The return of the Right Honorable Sir Humphrey Rossiter to public life after an absence of nearly two months was a gratifying tribute to his personal popularity. Newspapers commented with satisfaction upon his convalescence. He received an ovation from both sides of the House when he took his seat in Parliament. The sympathy of society had all the time been with him in the position in which he had been placed, a very trying one owing to his well-known friendship with the wife of the man whose death sentence he had been compelled to sign.

He had comported himself, it was felt, with dignity and propriety under very difficult circumstances, and had never given cause for the slightest suspicion of scandal.

Katherine Brandt, who, during the last few years, had made such rapid strides in her profession that she was now one of the most popular actresses upon the stage, had been at school with his wife, and before the latter's death they had been frequent companions. Her marriage had cut her off from a great many of her former friends. Her husband, Cecil Brandt, was rather a puzzle to every one. He was good-looking, evidently enormously wealthy, a good all-around athlete and an undoubted sportsman.

More About Brandt.

She had met him on a voyage back from Australia, become engaged upon the boat and married immediately on her arrival in England. It had been a surprise to all her friends and a disappointment to many of her admirers. No one succeeded in really liking him.

He took a shoot in Hampshire and he hunted in Leicestershire. He was proficient at most of the things men do, his manners were excellent and, although he seldom referred to the fact, it soon developed that he had come over from Australia in one of the earlier units to serve in the war.

His few connections spoke of him vaguely. Cecil had always been a rolling stone, they said. They had heard of him occasionally engaged in various enterprises—most of them, it appeared, successful—in various quarters of the world. He was a silent man, however, and seldom spoke of his doings, and men rather disliked him because they failed to understand him. Every one acknowledged his devotion to his wife, but that was discounted to some extent by his almost insane jealousy with regard to her.

Rossiter, however, had never hesitated in his loyalty to both of them. He was an inevitable visitor at Katherine's first nights and they were his frequent guests, both at his official residence and at the house in Chestow Square, where he had usually stayed since his wife's death. The position in which he was placed by Brandt's crime was viewed everywhere with sympathy. Like many men who are without intimate friends, Rossiter was perhaps the more popular on that account.

Enthusiasm at Club.

The first day of his reappearance was keen pleasure to him. He spent a couple of hours at the home office, lunched at his club, where he was received with the utmost enthusiasm, took his seat in the House for two hours and afterward called at a florist's and sent a box of roses to the Savoy Court. None of these activities, however, interfered with his original purpose. At half-past 6 he was seated in the private apartment of Gen. Sir Harold Moore, the chief commissioner of police at Scotland Yard.

"This is a great honor, Sir Humphrey," the latter observed, as he himself wheeled up an armchair for his distinguished visitor, poked the fire and pushed a box of cigarettes to the corner of his desk. "You ought to have sent for me, though. I could have come round to Whitehall at any time."

"Quite so," Sir Humphrey replied. "You are very kind, general, but I had a wish to see you here in the center of your activities, and I think it would be just as well if you sent for Matterson. As a matter of fact, I am going to tell you a rather strange story, and I fancy that the dealing with it will come under his administration."

Criminal Work.

"Criminal work, eh?" the chief commissioner remarked, as he took the receiver off his telephone instrument.

"Criminal work without a doubt," Rossiter assented.

Col. Matterson, who occupied the position of subcommissioner, obeyed his chief's summons promptly. He was a tall, thin man with a worn, thoughtful face, an almost immovable monocle and a pronounced habitude of silence. He greeted the visitor with interest and sank into a chair opposite him.

"Sir Humphrey has something to tell us," his chief explained, "which might come under your jurisdiction. I sent for you to come up at his suggestion."

"Very glad if I can be of any use," Col. Matterson murmured, with a curious glance across at the home secretary. He knew, as all the world knew, that the latter, during the last few months, had been in touch with the drama of life.

Like a Delusion.

"You are used to strange stories, I expect, general," Sir Humphrey began. "Here, I think, is one of the strangest you will have ever heard, and one upon which I require immediate action.

"I have asked myself over and over again," he went on, impressively, "whether it was possible that the whole thing might not have been one of those delusions heralding the nervous breakdown and brain fever from which I subsequently suffered. A flat aid positive negation is the reply to myself and to either of you two gentlemen who might conceive the same idea. What I am going to tell you actually happened to me on the night of December 19, on my way up from a few days' shooting with Lord Edward Keynsham at Keynsham Hall, near Fakenham.

The two men composed themselves to listen, full of polite interest, but without any idea of the shock in store for them. Sir Humphrey, in a still, precise tone which seemed nevertheless to convey all the time a thrill of the drama underneath, told his story. When he had finished, the chief commissioner had let his cigarette burn out unnoticed in the ash tray and was staring at his visitor, his mouth in very undignified fashion a little open. For several seconds he remained speechless. Then he was very British and unofficial.

"Well, I'm damned!" he exclaimed.

"I very nearly was," was Sir Humphrey's terse comment.

Chief Inspector Called.

The chief commissioner touched his bell and, in accordance with his instructions to the uniformed orderly who answered it, Chief Inspector Smithers, a tall, melancholy looking man with a slight, black mustache, sallow complexion and deep-set eyes, made prompt appearance. He had been writing a report, his fingers were inksmudged and his hair tousled. The subcommissioner, in obedience to a nod from his chief, took up the questioning.

"Smithers," he asked, "has there been any trouble down in Norfolk lately?"

The man shook his head.

"Not that I am aware of, sir," he replied.

"No rumor of any band of criminals roving about the place?"

"Not that I've heard of, sir."

Col. Matterson changed his line of inquiry.

"Have you had any report or information from any disrtict of a gang of burglars or criminals who have adopted a white mask as a means of disguise?"

The inspector shook his head with a somewhat superior smile.

Search for Gangs.

"Never heard of anything of the sort, sir. Sounds more like these gentlemen who write the detective stories about us."

"There are one or two ugly gangs working, as you know, Smithers," the subcommissioned went on. "One of them has been operating up Leeds way and another in the Manchester district. Is there any possibility of one of them having been in Norfolk or thereabouts on December 19?"

The inspector scarcely paused to reflect.

"Not the slightest, sir. Norfolk would be no country for them. There are no large manufacturing towns and no concentrated money. So far as we are concerned, Norfolk is one of our most peaceful counties."

Matterson conferred for a minute or two with his chief in undertones, then he turned round and once more addressed the inspector.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. William A. Evans.

Marihuana Smoking.

Marihuana smoking received a mixed bill of health at the hands of a commission of Army surgeons convened for the purpose of investigating the prevalence of the habit among soldiers in Panama, and advising the authorities as to what should be done about it. The report was definitely against the drug on three points. It found that from the medical standpoint the habit is detrimental to health; the habit is growing in prevalence; it causes intoxication and rapid pulse, and a mild drunken sleep follows as the second stage. These are points that will be considered as of importance by physicians, health officers, students of racial degeneration and the commanding military officers.

Another finding is liable to be of greater interest to those who have the habit or who are headed toward it. This conclusion was that the people who have the habit are either morons (23 per cent) or psychopaths (62 per cent). In other words, if a man is found to be a marihuana smoker the chances are about 6 to 1 that he is a weakling mentally.

The report says that smoking marihuana does not cause mental deterioration. At least, the investigators found that these young men had not been harmed mentally by using it two years or less. It did not make them nitwits. They were that way in the first place. If this report is accepted it means that people will come to think of marihuana smokers as either morons or psychopaths, and the tagged people will not be happy about that.

Some other findings are, in a measure, orchids that offset the scallions in this bouquet. Smoking the drug does not cause criminality or moral or mental deterioration. The investigators found records of only four arrests for which marihuana using was credited with responsibility. These records did not show any unusual disobedience or any particularly offensive misbehavior.

The drug is not habit forming in the sense that opium is. It creates no cell hunger. The physiologic effects were, first, mild intoxication and a sense of well being. This was followed by a desire to sleep. Smoking improved the appetite.

A great majority of the users said they preferred to use tobacco. They smoked the hashish just to kill time, to satisfy curiosity, to be amused, to be happy, to be satisfied, for pep. The urge was not a strong one. So feeble was it that any man of reasonably good sense should be able to recognize the folly of it and refuse to indulge.

The report saw no reason for the administrative officers to take extraordinary measures for controlling the use of the drug.

Not Contagious.

E. M. K. writes: Can you tell me if halitosis is contagious if you kiss a person who has it, and how it can be cured?

Reply.

Danger of contagion is not the reason for the lack of temptation. Halitosis is not contagious. The cure depends on the cause. The most frequent cause is remediable by change in the diet and the eating; bowel and exercise habits. Some cases are caused by ozena, a nose disease. Others by tonsils and teeth.

Three Picked To Rule D. C. Liquor Sales

C. W. Offutt, Isaac Gans, Mrs. Beverly Mason Comprise Board.

2 A. M. Curfew, Ban on Rum Display Put in Regulation.

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will consist of George W. Offutt, Mrs. W. Beverly Mason and Isaac T. Gains, it was decided yesterday by the District Commissioners. The appointments will be announced formally after President Roosevelt signs the liquor bill.

Regulations governing the sale of liquor will not be made public until they are formally adopted by the commission; but it is reliably reported the curfew hour on sales will be 2 a. m.

Rolling bars, successfully used in New York City to evade restrictions against fixed bars, will not be permitted. Mixing drinks of hard liquor at bars will be banned, although the serving of wines and beers at bars will be allowed.

Liquor Displays Banned.

The regulations as drafted, it is understood, require that drinks, mixed from hard liquor, must be prepared out of sight of patrons, and the display of liquor at bars is prohibited. Liquor bottles may be displayed, it is understood, in places where liquor is sold for consumption off the premises.

Between 2 a. m. and 9 a. m. no liquor or alcoholic beverages of any kind may be sold. In "off sale" establishments liquor sales may be made between 8 a. m. and 8 p. m., and on Saturdays until 9 p. m.

"Off sale" establishments may sell beer and light wines until midnight. Beer and light wines may not be sold after 2 a. m. This regulation, if adopted by the Commissioners, will supersede the existing regulation which permits the sale of beer at any hour.

The new liquor board will eliminate the necessity for the beer board, which granted permits to sell beer, but the board probably will retain jurisdiction over revocation of licenses.

Hazen Beats Allen.

Selection of two men on the board constituted a victory for Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen over Commissioner George E. Allen, who was anxious that it have two women members. Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals supported Commissioner Hazen.

Commissioner Allen yesterday offered a position on the board to Mrs. Woodrew Wilson, widow of the War President; but she declined.

Mr. Offutt, who will be chairman, four years, has been active in the civic and business life of the Capital a quarter of a century. Since he was graduated from Harvard Law School in 1909, he has practiced law here.

Was With Bank.

He was formerly a director and general counsel of the Potomac Savings Bank, of Georgetown. After the bank closed, he was named conservator.

Mr. Gans, who has a two-year term, is chairman of the District Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole. He served two terms as president of the Chamber of Commerce, and is also affiliated with the Board of Trade and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Mr. Gans came to Washington from Baltimore.

Mrs. Mason, appointed for three years, is the wife of a prominent Washington physician. She is the granddaughter of the late Anthony Kennedy, United States Senator from Maryland.

Trade Conditions Held No Ground to Cancel

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23.—Supreme Court of Appeals ruled today that poor business conditions are not legal justification for cancellation of a contract for the purchase of goods by a retailer.

The decision was made in affirming a ruling of the Fayette County Circuit Court directing E. L. Roberts and H. A. Carper, of Mount Hope, to pay E. L. Rice & Co., of Detroit, for jewelry purchased in 1932.

Mrs. Mattie C. Warren Rites at Hot Springs

Hot Springs, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held here today for Mrs. Mattie C. Warren, 85. A native of Arkansas, she lived here 60 years.

She is survived by two sons and three daughters, all of Hot Springs.

Episcopal Diocese Change Is Defeated

Norfolk to Remain Seat of Bishop.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 23 (AP). Headquarters of the Episcopal Church in the Diocese of Southern Virginia will remain in Norfolk, after defeat of a motion to reject the committee report and bring the subject before the diocesan council's annual session here.

Other matters of importance before the council today included the financial affairs of the diocese and decision by vote to have a full audit made of diocesan affairs; nominations for standing committees, the executive board and delegates to the general convention.

A large audince heard a sermon by the Rev. Vincent C. Franks, D. D., rector of St. Paul's Church, of Norfolk, in St. Paul's Church.

The council concludes its forty-second anual meeting tomorrow.

L. M. Wilson Appointed To Cumberland Council

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Lewis M. Wilson, attorney, yesterday was appointed a member of the city council to succeed John G. Shearer, Democrat, who resigned to fill a vacancy on the board of Allegany County Commissioners, caused by the death of Henry A. Bachman, Republican.

Wilson is a Republican. He will serve until April 1, when a mayor and four councilmen, to be elected in March, will take office. Wilson will serve as finance commissioner.

Swolley Conviction Held Kidnaping Blow

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—A conviction for kidnaping, with sentences fixed at life imprisonment for two reputed members of a "collegiate band" of abductors, was hailed by officials today as a severe blow to the kidnap racket in Illinois.

The defendants, Gail Swolley, 30, of Peoria, and Frank Souder, 31, of Benton, Ill., heard the verdict convicting them in criminal court last night of the abduction for ransom of James Hackett, Blue Island, Ill., gambler, without show of emotion. The jury deliberated two hours.

Mrs. Palmer's Funeral Today.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Services for Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, widow of Charles Palmer, who died Sunday, will be held tomorrow at St. John's Reformed Church. Surviving are four daughters, Mrs. Gray Barnhart, of New Hope; Misses Mildred, Maude, and Catherine Palmer and a son, Howard Palmer.

Grading Is Started On Amcelle Plants

Local Contractors Will Bid on Cafeteria.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Preliminary grading and excavation work for the $250,000 additions to the Amcelle plant of the Celanese Corporation of America has been started by the Hughes-Foulkrod Co., Philadelphia contracting firm. Actual construction on the two new units will be started by March 1, it was indicated.

Plans and specifications for the new plant cafeteria have been received by local contracting firms, which will submit bids on the project. Approximately 1,200 may be fed at one time in the building.

Rapid progress is being made on the two additions to Allegany High School, and the wings will be ready for occupancy by April 1, according to the contractor, James C. Powell. The two additions will provide 24 additional classrooms.

Red Cross of Roanoke Area to Meet Friday

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—District and local representatives of the Red Cross, with Dr. J. B. Nichols as the principal speaker, will meet here Friday. The county supervisors, the Roanoke Academy of Medicine and heads of social agencies will attend.

The Roanoke County Junior Red Cross will have charge of the afternoon program, directed by Mrs. E. B. Murphy. Miss Marian Butler, of the Roanoke Little Theater League, will present a health play.

Four Hurt, Driver Held In Maryland Accident

Frederick, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Four persons, Harry Stanbaugh, 62; P. D. Ewing, Mrs. C. P. Ewing and Dennis Snook, of near Thurmont, were injured when their automobiles collided near Emmitsburg last night. Stanbaugh was taken to the City Hospital.

Police said Stanbaugh's car hit the machine occupied by Ewing and his mother. Stanbaugh was held in $1,000 bond for a hearing tomorrow before Magistrate William J. Stoner, of Thurmont, on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Commission Sought to End Line Dispute

Hearing Before Judiciary Subcommittee Will Bring Out Plan.

Smith Bill Calls for 3 to Determine Virginia, D. C. Boundary.

The century old question of what constitutes the District of Columbia-Virginia boundary will arise again tomorrow when a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee holds a hearing on the Smith bill to authorize appointment of a boundary commission.

While sponsors of the measure anticipate no organized opposition, District Government officials will watch the proceednge with interest. Attorneys in both the District Government and in the Department of Justice have expressed opinions that much of the land now claimed by Virginia along the Potomac River is part of the District and perhaps belongs in part to the Federal Government.

Included in this controversial land is the Washington-Hoover Airport, which has been the subject of another House hearing in connection with a proposal that the Federal Government buy or lease the property for a Government airport. It has also been suggested that the District buy or lease the airport.

Traced to Baltimore Grant.

Title to considerable land just on the other side of the Potomac also will be at stake if the commission is formed. Suits in some instances have already been instituted by the Justice Department.

William A. Roberts, special assistant corporation counsel, wrote an opinion more than a year ago tracing the origin of the District back to the Lord Baltimore grant. He contended that the original District line ran on the far side of Roaches Run, which was many years ago the south bank of the Potomac River. The land in between what now constitutes the river and the filled-in Roaches Run, he said, consists of Alexanders Island and an accumulation of debris.

On the basis of this opinion the Public Utilities Commission exercised jurisdiction in the disputed territory and ordered the Potomac Electirc Power Co. to remove power poles that interfered with the airport.

Virginian Introduces Bill.

The boundary commission bill, introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, would authorize the President to name one commissioner to act in conjunction with a commissioner designated by Virginia. A third member would be selected by these two appointees.

As Washington police have generally considered the District line to end at the high-water mark of the present Potomac River, certain territory adjacent to Arlington Cemetery has become known as "no man's land" because of questionable police jurisdiction.

Steel Code Open Price Rule Held Beneficial

Pittsburgh, Jan. 23 (AP).—Open price provisions of the steel code should make important contributions to stability of the industry, Walter S. Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron and Steel Institute, said today.

He added, however, that neither price fixing nor universally higher steel prices have resulted as yet and pointed to a recent reduction in stainless steel prices and a general low average of all prices as evidence that competition is not abated.

Mae West Reported Threatened Again

Los Angeles, Jan. 23 (AP).—A report that Mae West, buxom blonde of the stage and screen, had been threatened again by telephone, came today to the courtroom where Edward Friedman is being tried on charges of robbing her of $20,000 in jewels and money.

Detectives guarding Miss West said they believed the call, received at her apartment, was a prank.

Harrisonburg Council Elects Luther T. Flick

Named to Unexpired Term; Democrats Now Control Body.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Luther T. Flick, assistant cashier and trust officer of the First National Bank, last night was elected by the Harrisonburg Council to serve out the unexpired term of Verne R. Slater, who died January 11.

Mr. Flick's term expires August 31 and he will come up for reelection in June with three other council members. Mr. Slater had served 21 years on the council.

The new councilman's name was the only one placed in nomination. A petition signed by several hundred persons, asking selection of former Councilman Morris Spiro was presented.

Political observers say the Democrats have control of the council for the first time in years, as Mr. Flick is classed as an independent Democrat. Mr. Slater was a Republican.

Councilman R. C. Dingledine, member of the State Teachers College faculty here, was named to the finance committee and made chairman of the water committee, two posts held by Mr. Slater. Councilman D. W. Thomas succeeds Mr. Dingledine as chairman of the police and safety committee.

Mr. Flick was appointed to the water and police and safety committees.

T. H. Weisenburg, 62, Will Be Buried Today

Kearneysville, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Thomas Henry Weisenburg, 62, long a resident of Jefferson County, will be buried tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Mount Zion Cemetery near here, following funeral services at the Bretheren Church at Leetown.

Mr. Weisenburg died Monday. He leaves his widow and five children, Thomas, Franklin, Lillie and Annie Weisenburg, and Mrs. Guy Schwartz, all of Jefferson County.

Senators Hold Forum Today On D. C. Plans

Citizens Invited to Meet District Committee for Discussion.

Informal Conference to Hear Suggestions on Progress.

District affairs will be discussed informally at an open forum conducted by the Senate District Committee at 10 a. m. today, in the committee room at the Capitol.

Invitation to participate has been extended by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman, to respresentatives of business and civic organizations, and individuals interested in District legislation.

Among those expected by Senator King to attend are representatives of the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Board of Trade, and Chamber of Commerce.

Two individuals have asked to be heard. They are Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker, who wrote she wished to discuss conditions in the public schools, and J. Wright, who complained of the condition of Woodlawn Cemetery.

Proposed by King.

The forum was proposed by Senator King as a means of bringing District residents and members of the committee into closer relationship. He believes the gathering will serve to focus attention on legislation desired by people of the District and afford the committee members an opportunity to get a cross section of public opinion.

No definite program has been arranged and the gathering will not be conducted as a formal hearing.

"The committee wants the people of the District to come and tell them what the needs of the District, as the residents see them," the chairman said.

Seizing Dope, Florida Bars Trainer

Reveal Needles, Formula, Raid Made on Eve of Hialeah Meet.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP).—Permanent debarment of Harry Cooper, race horse owner and trainer, and his stable, from all tracks in the State, and cancellation of his license as a trainer, was ordered today by the Florida Racing Commission.

The action followed Cooper's arrest on charges growing out of the finding in his home by Federal and State authorities of a quantity of narcotics, needles and alleged formulas for "doping" horses.

Cooper, who lives in suburban Hialeah, was held on $5,000 bond pending preliminary hearing before a peace justice, tentatively set for late today, but postponed until tomorrow.

Laer, he is to be given a hearing before a United States commissioner on a charge of possessing narcotics.

Probe Enery Into U. S.

Immigration authorities also said they would investigate reports that Cooper illegally had entered the United States from Canada. A news dispatch from Toronto quoted officers of the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association as saying they had no record of him as a horseman.

Calling a special meeting shortly after Cooper's arrest, racing commission members also barred from all Florida tracks Miss Catherine Treon, who was with the owner-trainer at the time officers raided his home.

The raid was made on the eve of a meeting here of racing commissioners from eight States with the Florida commission to discuss means of bettering race track conditions and reguations and posibly adopt uniform rules. States represented are New Hampshire, New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Maryland, in addition to Florida.

Rule off Haughton.

The racing commission today also ruled Edward Haughton, well-known trainer, off the Florida turf and canceled his training license for alleged doping of the horse Making Bubbles at Tropical Park last Saturday.

Saliva taken from Making Bubbles, which finished second to Grayback in the fourth race, was fuond to contain caffeine by the State Racing Commission chemist, C. E. Morgan. Haughton formerly trained for the Greentree Stable and has confined his campaigning chiefly to the Western tracks.

Banks in Checker, Chess Play Tonight

N. W. Banks, Nationally known checker and chess expert, will play 3 checker games blindfolded, 25 chess games and 100 checker games all at the same time tonight in the ballroom of the Harrington Hotel, starting at 8 o'clock.

Chess and checker players of Washington who will oppose him have been requested to bring their boards and pieces to the ballroom.

Banks set a world's record at the Century of Progress on Labor Day, winning 133 games, scoring 7 draws and averaging one move a second. In New York in April he will attempt to break his own record.

Injuries Force Nash, McDowell Off Eli Five

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Two of the star players of the Columbia University basket ball team suffered injuries in the Yale game Saturday which will keep one and possibly both on the bench for the rest of the season, university authorities revealed today. Bill Nash, sophomore center, suffered a dislocated vertebra in his back and Captain Owen McDowell fractured a small bone in his ankle.

Virginia Assembly To Hear Bill Terry

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.). An honor seldom accorded a private citizen will be bestowed on Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, when he visits Richmond next week.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, announced today he would invite Terry to speak before the General Assembly.

"I know the members will be glad to hear Terry, even if he did hang one on Joe Cronin and the Washington ball club," Hall said.

Hall attended all the Washington world series games last fall and rooted for the Nats. "If Terry can speak as well as he plays ball," Hall commented, "he'll make a big hit."

Hall recalled that Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, was the last baseball notable invited to appear before the Legislature. He failed to reach Richmond, however, because a scheduled exhibition game was rained out.

Tilden, Vines Are Sued for $250,000

'Manager' Charges He Was Employed to Arrange Net Matches.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 23 (AP). Ellsworth Vines, jr., and William T. Tilden 2d, now on a professional tennis tour, were sued for $250,000 in superior court here today by Normal L. Sper.

Sper alleges he entered into an oral agreement with Vines whereby he was to manage the former world's amateur champion as a professional, arrange matches with Tilden and obtain publicity for them.

After he had planned a tour with Vines and Tilden as the principals, Sper set forth, Vines declined to go through with the agreement.

William O'Brien also was named as a defendant. Sper alleged that O'Brien conspired with Tilden to induce Vines to terminate their agreement.

Sper asked $25,000 for services rendered; $125.000 damages for the alleged breach of contract and $100,000 punitive damages.

Denver, Jan. 23 (AP).—Informed of a suit filed against him in Los Angeles by Normal L. Sper, William T. Tilden 2d said here today "I have had no dealings with Sper and have nothing further to say in the matter."

2 D. C. Golfwomen Victors in Florida

Mrs. Hendrick, Mrs. Garber Win; Three Others Bow.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 23 (Spl.). Mrs. L. H. Hendrick and Mrs. M. B. Garber, both of Washington, won their first round matches in the women's golf tournament over the Riviera Golf Club course here today. Mrs. Hendrick disposed of Mrs. Jack Hagen, wife of the Salisbury, Long Island, pro, in the second division by 3 up and 2 to play, while Mrs. Garber advanced without swinging a club through a default in the fourth flight from Mrs. Vincent Henderson, of Philadelphia.

Three Washington women failed to survive the initial session. Mrs. J. T. Powell, bowed to Miss Marton Loth, of Cincinnati, by 1 up in the second division and in the same class Mrs. H. B. Hird lost to Mrs. Roof Gilson, of Cleveland, the former Georgia Coleman, diving champion, by 4 up and 3 to play. In the third flight, Mrs. J. H. Ford succumbed to Mrs. R. L. Whittle, of Elizabeth, N. J., by 3 and 2.

The elimination of the medalist featured the play in the title division. Miss Marion Hochheimer, of New York, triumphed over Miss Barbara Northwood, of Winnipeg, Canada, who led the field in the qualifying round, by 3 up and 2.

Rudolph, Cue Champ, Shows Here Monday

Rudolph is reported to be at the very top of his game and his showing here should be instructive as well as entertaining, for he will give an exhibition of trick and fancy shots at the conclusion of his match. His opponent, who will be selected from among the Capital City's leading amateurs, has not yet been named.

Schmeling Signs For Baer Bout

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (AP).—The signature of Max Baer, the prize ring's song and dance man, was all that was needed tonight to give Los Angeles one of festiana's plums, a return bout between the big Californian and Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion.

Lou Adro, Los Angeles promoter, popped into town today and shortly thereafter popped out again, bound for Baltimore and a conference with Baer with Schmeling's signature on a contract calling for a 12-round match in the Olympic Stadium in April.

If Baer, now doing a turn in vaudeville in Baltimore, agrees to terms, the match will be staged at a date to be decided upon later, with a part of the profits turned over to a California milk fund charity. Daro predicted the bout would draw $250,000 in gate receipts in Los Angeles.

Carnera Bout Off.

Baer rocketed to an outstanding position among the present day heavyweights by knocking out Schmeling in 10 rounds in a sensational upset here last June.

Ever since he has been seeking a heavyweight title match with Primo Carnera and not until last week was the door to that duel, most attractive offering on the heavyweight calendar, closed by Madison Square Garden, controlling Carnera through a contract that extends through September, 1934. The Garden ended negotiations for Baer's services when he refused to sign for future matches just in case he should win the championship.

Dempsey Not Discussed.

Failure of the Carnera match has left Baer with little available opposition. Tommy Loughran has the Florida date with Carnera, scheduled for February 22 in Miami, and Schmeling opens his comeback campaign against Steve Hamas in Philadelphia February 13.

Must Get $75,000.

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP).—Ancil Hoffman, manager of Max Baer, said Baer would sign a contract to meet Max Schmeling in Los Angeles "if they will guaranete us as much as they got in New York last summer."

He said Schmeling received approximately $75,000 for that bout, which Baer won, and that he would be unwilling to take less.

He said he had not heard from Lou Daro, California promoter, who was said to be en route to Baltimore to try to secure Baer's signature to articles for a 12-round match.

"We talked about it before," said Hoffman, "and I told him at the time if he could guarantee us the money Baer would fight."

Landon Court Teams Score Over Friends

The Landon School five chalked up its third consecutive victory of the season at the expense of the Friends team, which they defeated 34-23 in a game that was closer than the score indicates.

Friends took an early lead, but Landon snapped back to lead 7-6 at the end of the first quarter. They kept snapping, to lead 19-11 at the half, but in the third period Friends commenced popping them into the basket to close in to a 22-19 score going into the final quarter. In the fourth quarter, the Friends spark plug, Eakin, was removed from the game for personal fouls and Landon had little difficulty accumulating its ultimate victory.

As Series Leaders Bowed to Eastern High

Watch the Right Hand, Too

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Barney Ross, the little man who rose from featherweight and intercity Golden Gloves champion to be professional lightweight champion of the world, has been installed a two to one favorite over Billy Petrolle in their 10-round prize fight at the Bronx Coliseum tomorrow evening. If you ask me who installed him, then I will have to say that I do not know, although Betting Commissioner Jack Doyle did call up and say that Ross money was offering at two for one, with no Petrolle sugar in sight.

The wise money, the Broadway dough, the gambler's coin is all going on Ross. How do I know? I dunno. I just hear. How do I hear? Well, its hard to say. You just hear. If you let an ear hang out the window long enough, all sorts of curious sounds and noises and information will come sifting into it, like the rumor that there were a couple of queer and still unexplained angles to the Olin-Brouillard fight the other night. One just hears. You know how it is.

Now, I do not bet on sports events, but I do crawl out on the old hickory limb every so often and pick a winner publicly. I do not know very much about box-fighting, or the prize ring, but I do know that the Broadway murmurers, wise-guys, gamblers, sure-thing guys and petty larceny artists are the wrongest guys in the world when it comes to picking a winner. Why, they are even wronger than I am.

Therefore, I think I would like to pick Petrolle to beat Ross. He may even knock him out. If Jack Hurley's old man applies his left hand diligently to Barney's liver and then at an auspicious moment raises it to the chin . . . Did I hear a snore?

Ross beat Petrolle in Chicago when the old man had to move out of his hole and take up light housekeeping in a sweat box in order to make 138 pounds. It was a good, close fight and it is not recorded that Barney was particularly successful in his attempts to assault Petrolle and do him injury. Now Bill comes in at an easy 142 pounds, his natural weight, and the gamblers install Ross at two to one and there is even a chance that he will go into the ring at two and a half to one. Say, you don't suppose those Broadway smart boys have been listening to Jack Hurley moaning about age having finally crept up on Bill?

I think if a man wanted to lay aside a nice competency for his old age, he could earn himself one by running with the Broadway mob, finding out which way they were betting, and then wagering the other way. Incidentally, I do not hear any ugly rumors about this fight, which may come as a disappointment to some of my clients. The boys are going to be in there chucking them, if I may paraphrase one of Mack Gordon's new songs, right from the shoulder and straight from the heart.

Gee, I love to see those leveling matches where the old sedative rides every punch. They catch you by the throat, set your heart to banging and your blood boiling through the veins. Two perfect fighting machines meet one another for 30 minutes of dueling. One error of timing, one fraction of a second out of the half hour, and the machinery is wrecked. Sweet science and the punch.

I hope that somebody has spoken to young Barney about the old man's right hand. The left hook is the old cold-and-clammy with the professor from Fargo, but there is a graveyard smell to the right, too. About a year ago Hurley permitted his old man to prize fight against a very strong and brash young man who had been laying opponents among the sweet peas at a great rate. What was his name? I think it was Eddie Ran.

Anyway, they told Eddie, who was a pretty sweet right-handed puncher, to watch old Bill's left hand. "Do not take your eye off it," they told him, "because it is bad enough if he strokes you one with it while you are looking, but if you don't see it coming you never will wake up. Just circle away from it and keep the old lamps trimmed on it and don't ever forget."

Well, Edward did just what he was told and was doing very nicely. He moved away from the left, he blocked it and he watched it. This went on for five rounds. In the sixth round, old Will experimented gently a few times to make sure that Edward was still minding his lessons, found him still dutifully gluing his gaze to the left, so he shifted, threw his right through an opening no bigger than a doughnut hole and knocked Ran so cold that three gentlemen in the front row caught pneumonia from the sudden drop in the temperature. Yes, my children, Barney must watch that right hand, too.

Fred Schulte Signs 1934 Nat Contract

One of the most important communications delivered at Griffith Stadium by the mail man yesterday came in a big, heavy envelope and was postmarked "Belvidere, Illinois." Clark Griffith, Nat owner, opened it with trembling fingers, fearing that, perhaps, it was another 1934 contract returned unsigned.

But, much to Griffith's delight, the paper was duly signed and sealed and it was with great enthusiasm that he immediately broadcast to the world that Outfielder Fred Schulte had agreed to salary terms for the coming season.

Schulte, obtained from the St. Louis Browns in a trade during the winter of 1932, proved himself a sterling fielder and great ground-coverer with the Nats last season. His batting mark fell slightly below .300—.295, to be exact—but he was credited with driving in 87 runs and the Nats figure on him doing even better with the stick during the coming campaign.

Connelly Shoots Par 34 Nine at Rock Creek

John Connelly, Rock Creek Spring champion, played the second nine of Rock Creek's course in perfect figures yesterday, scoring a 34. It was the first time in his life he had leveled par on every hole. A 37 on the first nine gave him a 71 for the 18-hole round. Playing with him was George Marlowe.

Connelly's card:
4 3 4 3 4 5 4 3 4—34.

Red Flashes to Play.

The Red Flashes, a girls' basket ball team of the Southeast Community Center League, will play either Rockville or Al's A. C. Friday night at Hine Junior High School. Margaret Roudebush, Evelyne Wilson, Camila Belintende, Rose Waple, Elizabeth Whitney, Lena Pepper, Blair Gray, Janet Rock, Margaret Simmel, Elinor Imlay, Ruth Brown and Yetta Abelman comprised the Red Flashes team.

Wrestler Bar Lifted.

Indianapolis, Jan. 23 (AP).—Al G. Feeney, State athletic commissioner, today removed the suspension imposed several weeks ago on Chief Chewchiki, heavyweight wrestler of Ardmore, Okla. The chief was barred from wrestling in Indiana when Referee Heze Clark discovered two strips of sandpaper studded with tacks tucked in the Indian's tights. Pat O'Shocker was the chief's opponent.

Flashes Play Brooks.

The Red Flashes will play the Brooks Club Girls at Gonzaga High School at 8 o'clock tonight. Members of the Red Flashes are requested to report at 915 Eleventh street northeast at 7 o'clock.

Tommy Nolan Silences Nau for Runners-Up Victory Laurels.

Corcoran and Cavanaugh Are Heroes of Wild Nightcap Battle.

EASTERN beat the series—leading Central High School team—not as badly as people expected—but worse!

Thus Eastern muddled the inter-high school basket ball race yesterday by annihilating Central, 40 to 15. Roosevelt crept out of the cellar by trimming Western, 33 to 29. The games, staged at Tech High School, drew a 2,500 throng.

Lon, lean "Diz" Dean, Eastern's star guard with black flashing eyes, proved to be the chief nemesis of the previously undefeated Mount Pleasant outfit, Dean whipped the ball through the hoop five times and speared three charity flings in three attempts. Stealing the ball from the dribbling Centrals, intercepting passes and flipping them for scores, and playing a bangup battle in every sense of the word, gaunty Diz displayed the best form shown in the series to date.

Nolan Another Star.

Not far behind Dean in sterling performance was his teammate, Tommy Nolan, who kept the dangerous Buddy Nau, Central score king, silent throughout the fray. And when you silence Nau, you've played some game. Nolan's generalship throughout the contest and his feeding of the ball to Guy Edelin and Bassin was something to write about.

The Davis-Keyser duel at the tip-off position was ended after the first ten points of the game, because Bits Keyser was slowed up when he ripped his index finger on Davis' belt buckle.

One Goal in Quarter.

The Central team was held to a lone field goal by Mario Gregorio, which, incidentally, was the first of the game, for the first period of the game. Edelin shoved the Lincoln Parkers in the lead after Davis sank a foul goal, 3 to 2. The quarter ended, 7 to 2, in favor of Eastern. Eastern did 15 to 6 at the half.

The Kelly steamroller really got under way in the third period, and a bumper crop of field goals by the Lincoln Parkers came so fast that the score reached 31 to 9 proportions, to the surprise of the 2,500 on hand as well as the contesting teams themselves.

Only Kong Mandes, who substituted for Bryant at a forward spot for Central, seemed to know what it was all about. Mandes, in the game for only a short time, turned out to be the high scorer for his team with a pair of field goals and a brace of foul shots for 6 points.

In the nightcap, Western and Roosevelt put on as wild a game as has been seen in the series in many a day. Passing that went awry into the stands, spills that piled up half the players in the contest, and shooting that resembled a blind man stabbing at the moon, were rolled into 40 minutes—called the basement title battle.

But it was Jimmy Corcoran, of Western, and Jimmy Cavanaugh, of Roosevelt, who managed to break through for a spacious number of points. Corcoran carried off the high-scoring honors of lugging five goals and four free throws for 14 points, while Cavanaugh was a field goal short of the Western flash.

It was Western's twenty-fourth straight series loss.

Ross 7-5 Choice To Win From Petrolle

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (AP).—The twisted nosed old man in the Indian blanket, Uncle Will Petralle, from Duluth, trundles his creaking frame into action again tomorrow night against a youngster brimming with youth and health, Barney Ross, of Chicago, champion of all the lightweights.

That's come to be the traditional way of describing Blanket Bill and anything he tackles nowadays in a fistic way, he looks so old and punch-worn, blinking like an ancient in an arm chair by the fire, and he's about as ordinary and natural about the way he does things as a flea-bitten hound dog.

Tough When Fight Starts.

That's the way you talk about Uncle Will until he climbs those fighting steps, as he does tomorrow night in the Bronx Coliseum for his 10-round return engagement with Ross. Shortly thereafter you get very serious in your attitude toward the 29-year-old warrior. For any moment from the first bell on, he's liable to plant right in your lap any foolhardy youngster who believes what he reads in the papers.

Ross is one of those who can't be fooled by Petrolle's liking for the old man role and an appearance that belies the fact that he still is one of the cagiest, huskiest punching prize fighters in the 140-pound bracket. Ross and Petrolle fought ten rounds in Chicago before Barney lifted the lightweight title from Tony Canzoneri

On the basis of this past performance, Ross is a 7-to-5 favorite in a match that promises something of a miracle in New York's present-day boxing—a sell out—despite the fact that the Coliseum is so far uptown that fans who stick close to Broadway and pay little attention to other geography think you take a sleeper to get there.

$30,000 Gate Likely.

A sell-out crowd of 14,000 would run receipts up to $30,000, another gasper at a time when Madison Square Garden in the heart of the white lights, has been averaging about $8,000 a show. The match is being staged uptown as a result of a manager's munity against the Garden's policies. All the profits will be turned over to a Christmas tree fund charity.

With the weights set at 142 pounds, giving Petrolle about 5 pounds the better of it, the experts give Bill an even chance to win.

Rockville Lights Cop.

The Rockville High School lightweight five swamped the Damascus High lightweights, 29-8, in a one-sided contest played at Rockville yesterday. Rockville jumped into an early lead, was in front 26-6 at the half and dedicated the second half mainly to holding the opposition down to 2 points.

Maranville Names Own Price, $1,500 Under Fuchs' Figure

BOSTON, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—The little guy with the big name—Walter J. V. Maranville—got ready for his twenty-third season in big league baseball today after writing his own figure on a Boston Braves contract for 1934.

President Emil Fuchs of the Braves couldn't decide just how much to offer the "Rabbit," who held down second base all last season, so he mailed him a blank contract. It came back from Rochester, N. Y., Maranville's home, today and Fuchs pronounced the midget's valuation of his services as okeh.

"In fact, I probably would have offered him at least $1,500 more," Fuchs remarked.

One of the Boston morning newspapers has been reviewing this week the Boston Braves-Philadelphia Athletics series of 1914 in which the Rabbit, who had come up two years before from New Bedford, of the New England League, starred as the Braves swept four straight games.

Maranville, now 41, hopes to top off his playing career with another pennant. He told Fuchs he would report at St. Petersburg, Fla., with the first batch of players, and added, "You'll find me back there at second base, as usual."

Victor Beats Sandwrack By Head

Hernando Pays $40.70; Stretch Call Winner of Second Race.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 23 (AP).—Apprentice Allen Tipton, who rode so many winners in Maryland last fall, inserted himself into the spotlight here this afternoon by riding two long shots in a row, one of them in the feature event. After piloting Hernando home at $40.70 for $2, Tipton accounted for the Fleetwood Hotel Purse astride L. L. Lycan's standout, whose backers received $18 for each $2 wagered.

Standout held on like a bulldog in a blanket finish to score by a head over Sandwrack. The latter, representing Haughton, Jones & George, had only a half length on Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Polo Bar for place honors.

The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:45 1-5.

Gets Away Last.

Well Built, with Porter up, drew most of the play. She broke loose before the start but Porter held her in check. Returning to the post, the B. B. Stable filly hesitated long enough to get away last at the break. Porter then shot her up with a rush to take command. She faded after leaving the backstretch and Standout went to the front. Sandwrack fought it out through the stretch with the winner, but Tipton kept his mount going. Polo Bar circled the field turning for home and was a fast-going third.

The talent selected the right one in the curtain raiser, Screen winning $5.50 for $2. Twidgets, beaten a length and a half, earned the place by a half length, with Bernie K. third. Jimmy Hunter broke Screen on top and the gelded son of Tryster outfooted Twidgets and the remainder of the field throughout.

Stretch Call Wins.

Stretch Call, hustled along all the way by the tiny apprentice, E. Litzenberger, proved easily superior to seven other 3-year-olds in the second race. The Upset filly held the heavily backed Prize Package safe for the entire 5½ furlongs to score by a length and a half. Prize Package had no difficulty saving the place by two lengths from Waterset. Stretch Call paid $11.60.

Macadam, which displayed high speed only to stop in her previous outing, lasted all the way to the judges in the third event. The filly had two lengths to spare over Chimney Top, while Sequoia, coming from far out of it, was a close third. Macadam returned $15.50.

Hernando Pays $40.70.

Long shots had the fourth race all to themselves, while Happy Scot, the choice, finished a laboring sixth in the field of nine. Hernando accounted for the purse by two lengths and returned $40.70. Style Corner and Quorum followed, a half length apart. Happy Scot tired chasing Style Corner and Hernando, the latter moving clear under pressure in the last furlong. Quorum was a forward contender from the start.

Favorites continued to flop with the running of the sixth contest, which went to the $17.20 hazard, David W. Bert Lahr, a field horse, beat out Customer, a highly fancied filly, by a half-length for second money. David W made Customer stop in the stretch drive and easily stood off Bert Lahr's final bid.

Don't Blush, $11.20, won the last race by two lengths from Billies Orphan, with Ukraine third.

LaSalle Five Beaten.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—LaSalle Institute had its four-game winning streak snapped at Loretto, Pa., when it went down to defeat before the cagers of St. Francis Prep School in a hard-fought court contest by the score of 28 to 26. St. Francis won the game in the final period after being held on even terms by Coach Conways's team for three periods.

Lieut. Gallery, navy flier, was thrown from the cockpit of his plane accidentally when his safety belt loosened while the plane was turning over in a slow roll. He managed to hook the toe of one boot over the cockpit cowling to keep himself from falling. The plane rolled on over with Gallery still hanging on, and he was able to pull himself back into the cockpit and land safely.

One of the strangest common fish of the sea is the sun-fish. It lives to a great age, and sometimes weighs a ton. It has little or no fear of man, and is often seen in tropical seas basking itself in the sun. It is almost all head, with practically no tail at all. The brain, strange as it seems, is longer than the backbone.

Scientists investigating the tomb of Tut-Ank-Amen in Egypt, have a first class burglary case on their hands—with fingerprints of the criminals, but no hopes of making any arrests. The burglary was committed about 3,000 years ago, and although the fingerprints of the burglars are still plain enough, there is no ancient rogue's gallery where their owners may be identified.

The ancient grave robbers were apparently not much interested in precious metals and gems, for these they did not disturb. They took only the oils and ointments which were buried with the king.

Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 23.

Dear Al:

Blanked, skunked, goose-egged, whitewashed, setback, trounced, routed, swamped, shutout. Honest, the great Bennings failed to pick a winner today for the first time this year. Folks, I'm not kidding, either. In four straight races, from the second to the fifth, my horses were second. Somehow they managed to wiggle out of the top position. Style Corner was in front most of the way; Prize Package failed to make up ground he lost at the start; Chimney Top closed fastest of all, and Standout had to awaken from a sound sleep to beat Sandwrack. Thus, I close the alibi department.

I wired Clocker Mike after the seventh race that he could return to the Bennings camp. I received his answer just now. It says: "Those bums you picked ran where they belonged stop you'll have to get a reputation to associate with me now stop I'll be back the first time you have three winners." BILL.

First race—This is about the toughest race of the year. Juvenile maidens and fillies, at that. Of course they are hop, skipping and jumping those 3 furlongs. Idle Victory, Merrybud and Aunt Myrtle is my guess.

Second race—Gibby's Choice appears tob e the class of this cheap field and will appreciate the mile route. This might be the race that the Nutlet people have been awaiting. Zombro, of $590m utuel fame, might awake to become dangerous among these.

Third race—Calgary Kay breaks from the rail position and will have to be caught by this gang. He has Balthasar to beat, from where I sit. Quick Step gets away fast and may be a money figure at the finish.

Fourth race—Black Mock gets the Bennings call in this sprint. A brisk worker this one seems capable of carrying that 114 pounds home ahead of this field. Bramble Broom, in with a mere 94 pounds, will be ready if the top one makes a mistake. Caboose for the show.

Fifth race—Judge Schilling, thanks to the apprentice allowance, escapes top weight in this field; packs a lot of speed now and gets the edge over Renewed, one that has stepped lively in the morning. Old Traffic Judge comes back to action. If in shape he will make it hot for these sprinters.

Sixth race—Fairly Wild was in too stiff company last out and I'm passing that effort into discard. The handlers like price and they should get a chunk tomorrow. Looks like the spot. Major General and Moralist for the rest.

Seventh race—Let's try to make Rego take the measure of these fair 3-year-olds. We will have a courageous and improving horse to represent us. Cabochon is sharp and dangerous. Border Patrol for the other award.

Rough Battles On Mat Card Thursday

THE average rassle crowd is a regular melting pot as regards tastes—some like science, some like speed, some like strength and some like combinations of any or all of them. All, however, seem to like the going rough, and the Jim Clinstock-Vanka Zelesniak preliminary bout on Thursday's program at the Auditorium certainly should give them all they crave in the way of plain and fancy mauling and brawling.

Clinstock, the giant Redskin, has been a mat villain in his own right for lo, these many years, but his foe, known as the Siberian Wild Man, has been showing only cave man tendencies of late, and, judging from his last match here, is fast making up for lost time.

Surprised Against Dusek.

When Zelesniak first showed here, he was listed as a strong man. He was not particularly smart in the ways of rassling and did not relish punishment, especially around his midriff. But the bewhiskered powerhouse has been doing his stuff in New York for many weeks and he shocked the natives with his kneeing, slugging and generally rough work against Ernie Dusek last week.

Clinstock's rough work in bouts need not be called to anyone's attention here, for he is one of those whose name long has been on the fans' "hate" list. So, with the Siberian doling out the same type of punishment, those who like to see modified murder are promised quite a treat Thursday when these big, rough boys get together.

Londos Is Returning.

Jim Londos is returning here after an eight months' absence to appear in the feature against baldpated Count George Zarynoff. The latter showed plenty against Jim Browning, another title claimant, a few weeks ago and probably will make Londos put forth his best efforts if he is to clear this hurdle.

In the semifinal, Dick Shikat, who lost his title claims to Londos some time back, takes on George Manich, while two popular youngsters will continue their local build-up in the other melees on the card, Vic Christy facing a tough customer in Ernie Dusek, and Paul Boesch taking on Scotty McDougall. Both Christy and Boesch were thrown for losses in New York Monday night, but neither has been counted out here as yet.

Boston Sox May Add Winston-Salem Link

Boston, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—The Boston Red Sox probably will establish a working agreement with the Winston-Salem Minor League Club, General Manager Eddie Collins said upon his return from North Carolina today.

The Red Sox already have made agreements with the Kansas City, Reading, Pa., and Joplin, Mo., clubs, and completion of a deal with Winston-Salem would give the renovated Boston Americans contracts in yeagues of four classifications, AA, A, B, and C.

Babe Hollingbery Decries Constant Changes in Rules

Pullman, Wash. (AP).—O. E. "Babe" Hollingbery, grid coach at Washington State College here, is strongly against the constant changing of football rules.

The Cougar chief, who is a member of the national rules committee which meets next month, believes the rules are all right as they stand, he said, and favors giving them a test of time rather than a yearly shakeup.

Rule changes usually come as the result of some prominent coach who desires the alterations because of some effect they have had on his team winning or losing, Hollingbery asserted.

Commenting on the much discussed fumble regulation, the Cougar head man said: "I think the rule is all right as it is. Running with the ball is too great a penalty to pay for the error, particularly when the fumbling team has shown superiority in the other departments of play."

O'Brien Named Coach.

Aerosleigh Race Is Latest.

Leningrad (AP).—An aerosleigh race from Leningrad to the Pechora region in the tundra via Petrozavodsk, Murmansk and Archangel, in which 25 machines will participate, has been organized by the society for the promotion of automobiles and roads as a test of the practicability of this method of transportation in the Arctic regions.

Virginia Horse Breeders Urge Passage of Race Bill

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Virginia Horsebreeders Association, representative of the thoroughbred interests of one of the two greatest horse breeding States of the Union, went on record at its annual meeting here as indorsing the pari-mutuel horse racing bill to be cosponsored in the two houses of the General Assembly by Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, of Loudoun and Senator Cecil Connor, of Leesburg.

The association approved provisions of both the pari-mutuel wagering and racing commission bills. Belief was expressed that both bills had been so prepared as to place horse racing in the hands of responsible agencies and to control properly and wisely the practice of wagering.

Boost in Land Values.

The association further commended the passage of this legislation to the General Assembly with expression of "the confident belief that its enactment will greatly add to land values in the State suitable for the breeding of thoroughbred horses, provide wider markets for hay and grain, supply new outlets for the employment of labor and add substantial revenues to the State treasury."

In a communication to the association relative to the Hall proposal, Algernon Daingerfield, secretary of the Jockey Club, said: "I wish to congratulate you upon this bill. I think it should be most acceptable to the citizens and legislators of the State of Virginia."

Thomas G. Herring, of Harrisonburg, chairman of the meeting and retiring president of the association, said: "The present represents the most auspicious time at which a parimutuel, or certificate method of wagering on the result of horse races in the State could be presented before a Virginia legislative body.

High Plane Is Set.

"Desire, though, on the part of this association that horse-racing in Virginia be conducted on a high plane is such a fundamental principle in our campaign that any suspicion that racing in Virginia might not be would cause us to withdraw support of the bill."

Mr. Herring added: "When such Virginia horses of the present day as Sun Beau, the world's champion thoroughbred, and Gallant Knight, known the world around for his speed, have not been allowed to race in their native tSate, an injustice is being done the breeders of the Old Dominion."

Keneth N. Gilpin, of Boyce, was elected to succeed Mr. Herring as president of the association. Vice presidents serving for the ensuing year are William Dupont, jr., also of Boyce; John L. Witz, of Staunton, and Capt. Raymond Bellmont, of Middleburg. W. J. Carter, of Richmond, was reelected secretary-treasurer.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STRETCH CALL, $11.60, $4.10, $3.20; PRIZE PACKAGE, $2.90, $2.50; WATERSET, $6.80.

STRETCH CALL, showing excellent speed, broke on top, raced PRIZE PACKAGE into defeat, drew away in stretch, winning nicely in hand. PRIZE PACKAGE followed pace closely, but never seriously threatened the winner. WATERSET, well up all the way, made a game effort. TRANSVERSE ran a fair race. TOYTIME lacked speed.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:03½. Off at 3:06½. Winner, W. F. Phelan's br. f. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MACADAM, $15.50, $8.50, $5.50; CHIMNEY TOP, $6.40, $4.70; SEQUOIA, $2.90.

MACADAM broke running, was sent to the front with a rush, showed good speed, but was tiring at end. CHIMNEY TOP was crowded just after the start, but finished fast. SEQUOIA broke slow, but was lucky all the way by getting through on inside and finished with a rush. CALYCANTHUS, well up in early part, tired and should improve over this effort. DOLICE lacked early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37½. Off at 3:38. Winner, N. E. Stanton's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HERNANDO, $40.70, $19.90, $12.00; STYLE CORNER, $8.50, $5.90; QUORUM, $20.80.

HERNANDO was sent up with a rush, raced STYLE CORNER into defeat, then drew away, but was driven out to win. STYLE CORNER displayed good speed and held on well. QUORUM, never far from the pace, held on gamely. MACHILLA closed a big rush. GENERAL LEJEUNE came from far back. HAPPY SCOT stopped to a walk in final furlong. FRED ALMY ran a poor race.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. The Fleetwood Hotel. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:09½. Winner, L. L. Stocks Renew Advances in Active Trading Several Leaders Jump to New Highs; Sales Cut to 2,382,680 Shares.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Overcoming early hesitancy, stocks rallied with some spirit in the last hour today, and activity quickened as the advance was resumed.

The strongest demonstrations were confined to a few groups, including steels, aircrafts and miscellaneous specialties, but late buying was well distributed and the market on the average closed with a net gain of slightly more than a point.

The stock market's recent resistance to selling was undoubtedly responsible in part for the renewed efforts of bull traders to point the list higher.

New Highs Recorded.

Several leaders, among them American Can, General Motors, Borg-Warner, Douglas Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright "A" and Moto-Meter, reached new highs for the past year or more. Foreign buying, brokers reported, was being received in larger volume, and numerous items in the day's news grist were quickly made use of by professional and other traders.

Aviation issues had their best day in some time, rising 1 to 2 points or more. Demand for these shares, as well as for steels, appeared to have been prompted by the House Naval Committee's favorable report on the Vinson bill authorizing about $470,000,000 in new construction, the obvious inference being that such a program would stimulate business for those two industries.

Also, a financial ticker service estimated that the U. S. Steel Corporation would report for the final 1933 quarter its third successive operating profit which, it was said, had approximated five or six millions. This would be smaller than the good third quarter, but it was thought possible that the company's showing for the year would be a profit from operations of around $18,000,000, contrasting with the 1932 deficiency of nearly $13,000,000. Several steel shares were up about a point.

Rails Are Firm.

Rails were quiet but firm. Norfolk & Westernu voted its first extra dividend, $2 a common share, since 1931, of which almost $1,200,000 will go to the Pennsylvania on the stock held by that road. Strength in "heavy" industrials was especially noticeable in General Motors, which crossed 38 for a gain of more than a point.

The demonstration may have reflected motors' substantial interest in aviation activities. The company's earnings report, due soon, is expected to reflect the usual letdown which is seasonal for the final quarter.

Chemical stocks effervesced strongly, Allied rising 3¼ and Du Pont 2½. Early demand for metals was partly inspired by rumors that 9-cent copper was in prospect, although later the market heard that provision for a minimum price might not be included in the code.

Chain Stores Rally.

Chain Store shares were among the favored specialties, Hahn preferred, McCrory preferred and Spiegel May Stern rising briskly. Cuban recognition found representatives of that island's major industry on the upgrade, although they appeared to have partly discounted such action, Cuban American Sugar preferred jumped nerly 4. Sales for the day totaled 2,382,680 shares.

The market average is now less than 10 points under the July top from which prices tumbled abruptly into a decline that lasted into the winter. Whether quotations have been advancing too rapidly, even with allowance for business improvement either actual or expected, is a question that is currently receiving consideration in some quarters.

American Metal Market, in its weekly comment, said that although the general swing in steel demand was slightly upward, "the flow of orders is irregular and production fluctuates." There has been a decrease in finished steel shipments. Foreign exchanges again moved narrowly as the Senate Banking Committee voted changes in the monetary bill, placing time limitations on the stabilization fund and the Presidential power for devaluation.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Storm of Protests Against Curtailing Expenditures of CWA Indicates What Is Ahead When It Comes to "Tapering-off" Federal Spending.

By Ralph West Robey.

Those who hold to the "tapering-off" theory of Government expenditures must have been shocked severely by the reception accorded the suggestion of Mr. Hopkins for a gradual reduction of CWA relief. Instead of it being received as merely the carrying out of the President's promises and plans, a storm of protest has arisen from one end of the country to another. It is, we are told, simply unthinkable that there should be a reduction at this time—that what we really need is more, not less, Federal spending.

The explanation of this outburst, according to the "tapering-off" school, is that as yet business has not improved sufficiently. Or, more accurately perhaps, that it is not certain it will have improved enough by next May and June to make it wise to start laying plans for a reduction of relief at that time. A better course, it is said, would be for the Government to make arrangements to carry on the relief on an undiminished scale, and then cut down on the outlay to whatever extent actual improvement justifies. In this way, it is explained, we will protect ourselves against a crisis through a lack of funds for relief should such continued Government aid be necessary.

Such An Argument Only Superficially Convincing.

Superficially, such an argument sounds rather well. Business has not improved to the point that there is any appreciable decline in the need for relief. Further, it is not at all certain that such improvement will have occurred by early summer, although there is general agreement among business analyists that we are on the upgrade.

If one looks beneath the surface however, it immediately is evident that this line of reasoning is not convincing. The storm of protest against the reduction, in other words, does not arise primarily because people are afraid there will not be business improvement. Rather, it is the outgrowth of the conviction that the expenditures through the CWA, PWA, AAA, &c., are responsible to a marked degree for the improvement and will continue to be so. Even granting there is a groundswell of betterment more or less throughout the world, it still is a fact that these forces are not sufficient to absorb the airpockets created in our economy by the great spending program of the Administration.

Airpockets Will Continue to Exist in Our Economy.

Because of these airpockets the spending must be continued if a relapse is to be prevented. The same argument will apply months from now, too, just as well as today, even though both prices and the volume of business activity are substantially above the present level.

In other words, the artificiality created by the Government's injecting hundreds upon hundreds of millions of dollars into our economic system will continue to exist. It will remain a net addition to the purchasing power over and above that resulting from the productivity of our workers. Always, therefore, we shall have the problem of being willing to suffer the readjustments that must be made when this water is squeezed out of the system.

Now it appears that it will be easier and simpler to let the readjustment take place after we are on a higher level. When we are on a higher level, however, we shall want to delay it until we get a still higher level. And so it will go. The time to show courage, in other words, is now—not after a long series of concessions. If the President makes a compromise now on his original plan, there will be just that much less reason to believe that he will not make a second compromise when the problem arises again.

Bond Market Yields Slightly; Sales Dwindle

Investors Await Outcome of Money Plan; Dealing, $17,009,000.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The bond market was mildly irregular today as various traders and investors either lightened their holdings or stood aside to await announcement of the Treasury's new financing terms.

Sales dwindled to $17,009,000, par value, against $18,417,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues sagged one-tenth of a point, to 80.8.

This was the first decline in the average since January 6, last.

Market Turns Cautious.

While earnings statements and current business apparently continued to impress the market favorably, the sustained advance of more than two weeks was said to have engendered a more cautious attitude on the part of some operators.

The Government financing, although expected to be of an orthodox type, was still an uncertainty which caused some hesitation in the expansion of commitments.

U. S. Government securities were inclined to ease a bit, but few of these loans were unduly heavy and transfers here were only about $1,000,000.

Cuban Loans Gain.

Some Cuban loans advanced 1 to 4 points on announcemet of United States' recognition of the new government. Among these were bonds of Cuban Northern, Havana Electric, Cuba Railway and Cuban Cane Products.

Cuban Republic obligations, however, were inclined to lag, probably already having discounted the action of Washington. The Chileans and some of the Brazilians were sympathetically firmer. Loans of Germany, Batavia, France and Germany improved.

The more active domestic gainers included some bonds of American & Foreign Power, American Telephone,, American Waterworks, Chesapeake & Ohio, St. Paul, Delaware & Hudson, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, International Telephone, Missouri Pacific, New York Central and American Rolling Mill. Warren Bros. 6s advanced 5 points on a moderate turnover. There were numerous losers of fractions to around a point.

Curb's Prices Finish Higher As Sales Drop

Oils and Metals Close Firm; Turnover Off to 332,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—With a few exceptions prices finished moderately higher on the Curb Exchange today. Trading was at a reduced rate, particularly during the forenoon, when the trend was mildly irregular. Volume increased, however, as rallying forces gained the upper hand in the late trading.

Utilities largely recovered after an early dip. A few inactives were slow to come back, including Commonwealth Edison and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore. Alcohols acted similarly, minor recessions predominating in that group.

Oils and metals were firm, while some active gains were shown by recent industrial favorites. Shares closing 1 to 2 or more points higher included Aluminum Co. of America, American Laundry Machinery, General Tire & Rubber, Pan American Airways, Jones & Laughlin, Montgomery Ward A, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Newmont, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, A. O. Smith and Swift International.

U. S. Leather Nets $981,019 In Fiscal Year

Norfolk & Western Votes Extra $2 Dividend on Common.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—A net profit of $981,019 for the ten months ended October 31, 1933, was reported today by the U. S. Leather Co. This is equivalent to $12.95 a share on the 7 per cent cumulative prior preference stock, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends.

For the year ended December 31, 1932, the company had a net loss of $1,806,385. The fiscal year has been changed to end October 31, instead of December 31.

Directors of Norfolk & Western Railway today declared an extra dividend of $2 a common share in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of $2, both payable March 19 to holdings of record February 28.

For the six months ended December 31, 1933, comprising the first half of its fiscal year, A. P. W. Paper Co. reports net earnings, after all expenses, interest and depreciation, of $84,521.

These earnings, according to F. Gardiner Perry, treasurer of the company, represent an increase of 215 per cent, compared with the revised figures for the corresponding period of the preceding year, being equivalent to 53 cents per share on 158,207 shares outstanding, compared with 17 cents per share earned on 156,000 shares outstanding a year ago.

Lane Bryant, Inc., reports net income of $98,408 for the six months ended November 30, 1933, against net loss of $171,938 for the same period of 1032.

Net earnings of the A. P. W. Paper Co., for the last six months of 1933 amounted to $84,521, an increase of 215 per cent over revised figures for the comparative period in 1932, F. G. Perry, treasurer, said. The figure is equivalent to 53 cents a share on the capital stock compared with 17 cents in the last six months in 1932.

Norfolk & Western Railway reports net income for 1933 of $22,301,140 after taxes and charges, equal ot $15.20 a common share, compared with $16,811,918, or $11.30 a share in 1932.

The road's December net operating income was $2,274,741 against $2,251,555 in December, 1932.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

(Associated Press.)

The position of the Treasury January 20 was: Receipts, $4,420,333.06; expenditures, $33,367,482.17; balance, $537,356,084.76; customs receipts for the month, $17,515,863.95.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1) were $1,628,718,951.12; expenditures, $3,356,336,800.09 (including $1,743,207,743.54 emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $1,727,617,848.97.

German Import Duties On Cotton Goods Raised

A German government decree, effective February 1, 1934, alters the tariff classification on cotton goods (items 453 to 457), which, it is understood, will materially increase the tariff protection for finer cotton goods, according to a cablegram from Acting Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, Berlin.

Under the new classification, the duties on unbleached cotton goods will be based on the counts of yarn used, with surcharges provided for bleached and dressed cotton goods, based on the weight per square meter.

Wool Markets.

Boston, Jan. 23 (A.P.).—(U. S. Dept. Agr.)—A few inquiries were received on medium fleeces, but sales were very slow and holders were not inclined to accept bids which were below the maximum prices received on the last sales of sizable volume. Some houses asked higher prices than the range of 42@43 cents in the grease which has prevailed for several weeks on strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood Ohio and similar fleeces. Up to 43 cents in the grease was asked on strictly combing 48s, 50s ¼ blood Ohio fleeces, but offers were mostly 41@42 cents.

Cotton Losses Overcome by Closing Rally

January Closes at 11.10 as General Market Rises 2 to 4 Points.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—An early decline in cotton was followed by recoveries today on trade buying and covering prompted by the action of the stock market and evidences of an improved technical position.

March contracts after selling off to 10.97, or 15 points net lower, rallied to 11.15 in the late trading, with the general market closing barely steady at net gains of 2 to 4 points.

Following an opening decline of 5 to 8 points in response to lower Liverpool cables, long liquidation and foreign selling the market worked gradually lower during the forenoon.

The market turned firm in the late trading on commission house demand and trade buying. May sold up 17 points from the lowest touching 11.30, and closing quotations were at about the best levels of the day.

Some early selling was attributed to uncertainty over the prospects for legislative action to control production.

The report of the Census Bureau placing ginnings prior to January 16 at 12,558,762 bales was without apparent effect on the market. At the same time there was a persistent demand from trade sources and continued reports of a firm spot situation in the South.

Exports today 24,575 making 4,764,977 so far this season. Port receipts 29,391. U. S. port stocks 3,869,428.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firm today, with trading confined to the July position, which advanced on scattered covering and trade buying influenced by the firmness of grain and hogs and the steadiness of lard. Final prices were 4 points higher where business developed. Sales totaled 6 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; January closed 4.85, March 4.80, May 4.95, July 5.15.

Daily Oil Yield Decreased by 3,153 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 23 (AP).—The United States crude oil production last week dropped 3,153 barrels to 2,363,702 barrels, the Oil & Gas Journal estimates.

This figure still is far above the National allocation of 2,183,000 barrels.

Other comparisons: Kansas, up from 108,230 to 114,645 barrels; Eastern area, up 2,500 to 124,500 barrels; Rocky Mountain, down from 80,750 to 71,630 barrels.

NRA Aids Steel Industry.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—With wages increased by the NRA code, the per ton cost of producing steel has risen 70 per cent since June, W. S. Tower, secretary of the American Iron & Steel Institute, said today. He praised the code's "open price" provision which he said had established fair competition and stable markets.

Tobacco Markets.

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 23 (A.P.).—The season's record on the Abingdon burley tobacco market was broken yesterday when 560,000 pounds brought an estimated average of over $12 a hundred pounds, R. W. McFarland, sales supervisor, attributed the increase average to "a natural advance for all grades of tobacco, including common grades." He said bright wrappers sold as high as $40 a hundred while the better grades were from $2 to $5 higher.

Sales on other Southern Appalachian markets were:

$24,571,859 Gold Received On U.S. Order

2,181 Ounces of Silver Respond to President's Proclamation.

Reports from the Federal Reserve banks to the close of business January 19, 1934, show deposits of gold coin received under the Secretary's order of December 28, 1933, amounting to $9,537,686.47 and gold certificates in the amount of $14,269,600, a total of $23,807,286.47.

There also have been deposited in the New York assay office gold bars at an accepted value of $200,572.69.

There has been received at the Treasury gold coin in the amount of $134,000 and gold certificates amounting to $430,000.

Total Receipts of Gold.

Total receipts of gold coin, bullion and certificates from December 28, 1933, to January 19, 1934, inclusive, under the Secretary's order are thus $24,571,859.16.

In a few instances the Secretary's office and the office of the Treasurer of the United States have received gold coins sent anonymously and without any means of identification.

Those who deliver gold coin or certificates may still obtain reimbursement for them in other currency at their face value. If those who have sent gold anonymously to the Treasury can establish identification of their remittances they will be reimbursed by the Treasury.

Receipts of Silver.

Receipts of silver by the United States Mints under the executive order of December 21, 1933, were 477 ounces for the week ended January 19, 1934. All of this was received by the Denver Mint.

Total receitps since the President's proclamation became effective have been 2,181 ounces, of which 1,789 ounces were received at Denver and 392 ounces at San Francisco.

Total silver production in the United States, for the calendar year 1933, has been estimated by the Bureau of the Mint as 22,141,130 ounces. This would indicate a monthly production of close to 2,000,000 ounces. The relatively insignificant amount so far received by the mints is explained by the fact that the production of refined silver is a by-product of the refinement of other metals, notably copper, and therefore a considerable time necessarily elapess after the mining of silver bearing ore until refined silver may be delivered to the mints.

Coinage of Dollars.

Inquiry has been made as to how many silver dollars have been coined by the mints in pursuance of the executive order. The answer is that none have been minted.

The executive order authorizes the retention of one-half of the silver received as seigniorage and the coinage of the remainder into standard silver dollars. The 2,181 ounces of silver so far received would thus enable the mints to coin about 1,500 standard silver dollars.

The capacity of the three United States Mints, on a single shift basis, is 140,000 silver dollars a day, as follows: Philadelphia, 60,000; Denver, 40,000; San Francisco, 40,000. To coin 1,500 standard silver dollars would take less than one-half hour's operation at any one of the mints. The fact is that not enough silver has been received to justify starting operations.

Freight Loadings Increase.

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Milwaukee road reported that carloadings for the week ended January 20 totaled 22,557, as against 20,350 in the corresponding week of 1933.

Radio Waves And Ripples

IF there is one thing Aunt Sadie enjoys more than the True Story Hour it's the Arlington time signals. It makes no difference whether the Marine Band is on or not, Aunt Sadie listens to the time signals.

She says they sound so everlastingly practical. We have never felt very strongly about their practicality, but we have used strong words to express how everlasting we feel they are.

One day we took Aunt Sadie aside and sought to reason with her, remonstrate, offer small bribes such as promising to call Western Union every day for the exact time and set all her watches and clocks—she has an even dozen of them which she keeps running—before going back to the office. It was then that we caught our first glimpse of a side of Aunt Sadie we had never suspected before. A dreamy, far-away look came into her gray-blue eyes and her cheeks were lightly flushed as she said:

"They make me think of strong men at sea and ships with the wind singing in their rigging."

WHEN we had recovered, our first thought was that she had been kidding, though we never had known Aunt Sadie to do anything remotely suggestive of a joke before. We ventured some remark about the Navy's coming into Atlantic waters next summer and that she might, if she liked, run down to Norfolk. But that dreamy look was still in her eyes

Aunt Sadie, of all people! Aunt Sadie, who had spent her entire life before coming to live with us two years ago, in Perry, Mich., where the nearest water is in a river less than 100 yards wide, dreaming of sailors. We began to think maybe it wasn't such a good idea, her going down to the wharves three times a week for oysters

Aunt Sadie's domination of the radio which she brought with her from Perry, is making Cousin John rather desperate. John likes the Marine Band almost as well as he likes Ted Weems. Just the other day he threatened to go out and buy a saxophone with which to make his own music. When we suggested a phonograph might satisfy his yearning more easily and immediately, all he could think of to say was "Smarty!"

Maybe we were wrong about his having grown too large for us to give him boxing lessons.

Whitecaps.

WRC — J. Harold Murray, stage and screen star, with the Troubadours, in a program of music from Murray's shows, 9 p. m.; Senator Black, of Alabama, "Air and Ocean Mail Subsidies Paid by the U. S. Government," 10:30 p. m.; LaParee Orchestra, 11:30 p. m.

WMAL—Alice Joy, the Dream Girl, returning, 4:15 p. m.; Ambassadors Bullitt and Troyanovsky addressing the American Russian Institute dinner, 10:30 p. m.; Jerry Freeman's Orchestra, 11:45 p. m.

WJSV—Western High School-Baltimore City College debate, 3:15 p. m.; Albert Spalding plays two selections from his own suite of tone poems, "Etchings," 8:30 p. m.; Rosemary Lane singing "Supper Time" and "Not for All the Rice in China," with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, 10 p. m.

Several years ago Gene Buck was crying into his breakfast coffee over the way radio had ruined the song publishing business. In 1926, for instance, three leading song publishers sold $3,447,775 worth of sheet music. In 1932 these same firms sold $827,154 worth. The radio was making new songs old almost before the publishers could get music to distributors. So Mr. Buck's American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers began to collect handsome royalty fees from radio and it was the broadcasters' turn to shed tears.

But the worm, it seems, has turned, though it is just a little difficult at this writing to determine who will do the early morning crying. During the past six weeks the sale of sheet music and phonograph records has taken a tremendous jump. "Smoke Gets in' Your Eyes," "The Old Spinning Wheel" and "The Last Roundup" have been selling around 4,000 copies a day. Other tunes have been enjoying a large sale.

Why? Radio again is your answer. Radio, once the killer of sheet music sales, is now responsible for its boom. Radio which took people away from phonographs and pianos, is driving them back. How? By following one uninteresting program with another similarly dull.

At least, that's how some well-informed persons we know account for increased sheet music sales. The broadcasters, doubtless, have another idea. It is our notion that too much similarity in programs, however sprightly and well contrived, shortly makes them all uninteresting.

Alfred H. Morton, business manager for the National Broadcasting Co.'s program department and formerly Washington representative of the Radio Corporation, will be decorated with the French Legion of Honor by French Ambassador Andre de Laboulaye at the Embassy this afternoon.

The award is for service to the French government in radio development performed while Morton was in France as the European representative of R. C. A. from 1929 until his joining the N. B. C. staff last November.

Morton was in Washington from 1921 until R. C. A. sent him abroad.

There was an odor about WRC studios so unpleasant that, until last night, people were talking.

Engineer Bob Terrell last night found between the walls a mouse, quite dead—starved, he opined, because he, unlike other engineers who preceded him on the night shift, never ate in the studio, and never dropped crumbs around on the floor.

N. B. C. has decreed that the schooner Seth Parker will not be available for public inspection when her skipper, Phillips Lord, ties her up at the O street wharf next week.

Western High School and Baltimore City College debate on WJSV air waves at 3:15 this afternoon, the Washington lads supporting the negative side of the proposition "Resolved: That the United States should adopt the British system of radio control."

Western will be represented by William Smith, Reba Edelman and Charles Osborne. They will be judged by Dr. George Farnham, former director of debate at George Washington University; Prof. William Hutchins, head of the dramatic department at American University, and Prof. H. G. Roberts, present director of debate at George Washington.

The debate will be conducted in WJSV's studios and is scheduled to consume an hour.

PUBLIC NOTICE

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, January 16, 1934. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia propose to conduct a hearing on the advisability of closing Maine Avenue between 3d and 4½ streets N. W. and Missouri avenue between 3d and 4½ streets N.W. All interested property owners are hereby notified that pursuant to the provisions of said act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the board room on the fifth floor of the District Building on MONDAY, February 5, 1934, at half o'clock p. m., to determine the question as to any property rights which may be affected, or as to the equity, justice or advisability of said closings. Map showing said closings will be exhibited at said hearing and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the same which may be offered by any party interested. C. MELVIN HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, JOHN C. GOTWALS, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

PROPOSALS

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, January 23, 1934. Sealed proposals will be received at room 509, District Building until 2 o'clock p. m. January 31, 1934, and then publicly opened for constructing about 2,920 linear feet of 8 and 12-inch cast iron water main in Thirteenth street between Massachusetts avenue and Logan Circle northwest. All materials to be furnished by the District of Columbia except lumber for bracing, and cement, sand and gravel for concrete. Apply room 427 District Building for proposals, specifications and drawings. 24

MY LAND! IT'S A WONDER YOU DIDN'T GET A OFFAL COLD FROM GETTING SOAKED YESTERDAY — I BET LONNY STAYED UNDER HIS UMBRELLA AN' DIDN'T GET WET —
YESSUM —
BUT HE GOT A COLD —
DID HE WEAR HIS OVERSHOES, TOO?
YESSUM — AN' HIS MUFFLER — WELL, YOU ARE TH' MOST CONTRAIRY BOY I'VE EVER KNOWN — AN' SO IS HE!

Walt Mason, Himself

The Noisy Night.

The divers noises of the night seem far from safe and sane; all sorts of critters take delight in raising Tubal Cain. Man works all day with spades or hose, or as a chimney sweep; he goes at night to his repose, and hopes for tranquil sleep. Tired nature's sweet restorer seems the finest thing in sight; he hopes to have some pleasant dreams throughout the silent night. He lies down in the restful dark, and hopes to slumber soon; and then some dog begins to bark, in anguish, at the moon. He opens up the window wide, and props it with a stick, and, muttering "Doggone your hide," he throws a hefty brick. Perhaps he hits the bowwow's slats, and drives the beast away; but then a lot of vagrant cats begin their nightly play. They shriek in some adjacent nook, they yowl around the block; he throws a bootjack and a book, an oil stove and the clock. Perhaps the tomcats take the hint and kindly disappear; but then some wastrels start to sprint along the sidewalk near. They sing sweet songs of Adeline, and also of Ben Bolt, and make cold chills run up his spine, and give his nerves a jolt. When morning gilds his bedroom wall, he's had but forty winks, and he would like to hire a hall and tell just what he thinks.

Will Rogers in "Mr. Skitch" Is Previewed—The December Box-Office Champions

Droll Comic a Travel Talker In Fine Scenic

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

Momentarily abandoning the more or less substantial and closely knit drama of such vehicles as "Dr. Bull," his last picture, and "David Harum," his next, Will Rogers, in "Dr. Skitch," coming to the Fox on Friday, embarks on a happy-go-lucky tour of the most magnificently picturesque of the National parks scattered over the West, and permits scenery to take the place of situation.

This was demonstrated to the considerable pleasure of the local dramatic desks in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon.

About midway of its length, it began to dawn upon the assembled scribes that "Mr. Skitch" was not going anywhere, dramatically, but that it was going a great many delightful places, geographically. Once this point of view had been apprehended, "Mr. Skitch" took on amplified interest as a travelogue of surpassing beauty, enlivened by a steady flow of mildly provocative humor and a lackadaisical romance between the juveniles of the story.

"Mr. Skitch" unreels the story of a small-town jack-of-all-trades who takes his family in the trusty old Buick and sets out in quest of forage, if not fame and fortune, when the sheriff dispossesses him and sells the family furniture right out from under him and his wife.

The Long Way 'Round.

The subsequent wanderings of Ira Skitch and his wife and children, via Yellowstone National Park, the Grand Canyon and the rugged grandeurs of the California-Nevada line to the Pacific Coast, supply all the narrative there is in the film.

The picture, as intimated, becomes almost immediately a triumph of Mr. Rogers' dry wit, ZaSu Pitts' fluttery perturbation and Nature's majestic handiwork, with Nature in the final analysis having a little the best of it.

"Mr. Skitch," which will be completely reviewed in this space in due course, may be summarized for the time being as a concrete exemplification of the fact that occasionally the conflicts and the struggle of conventional drama may be omitted from the cinematographic formula without impairing the given subject's value as engaging entertainment.

It comes to the attention of this department that Jane Wheatley, actress and stage director, who is responsible for the staging of "Dangerous Corner," the J. B. Priestly introspective melodrama currently at the National Theater, appears in the role which she created in this hit play and during the local engagement will play it for the 400th time. Miss Wheatley's last previous appearance in the National Capital was in George Bernard Shaw's "The Apple Cart."

Those "Follies!"

Evidently harboring a resentful recollection of the not overly enthusiastic reviews that greeted the Washington presentation of their production of the so-called "Ziegfeld Follies" at the National Theater some weeks ago, the Shubert offices in New York have forwarded marked pages of Robert Benchley's warm appraisal of the revue as New York saw it, approximately a month after it visited this city in its hopelessly incomplete and unfinished state.

The idea, no doubt, is to impress upon the Capital's benighted reviewers how woefully in error they were. Mr. Benchley rates the "Follies," as the Winter Garden in New York knows it, as superior in many important items to the last few of the musical shows the late Flo Ziegfeld himself put on before his death. Mr. Benchley, being an erudite as well as an honest critic, beyond question has written what he saw and what he thinks.

It would be interesting, nevertheless, to know what he might have written of the same production—at least it bore the same name—as it opened in this city.

Mr. Anderson Speaks Up.

Perhaps something along the same line can be deduced from what John Murray Anderson, the noted director, has had to say about the show at the time he took it over—which was immedaitely after it had left Washington.

Lucius Beebe, the thoughtful young commentator of the New York Herald-Tribune, quotes Mr. Anderson as follows:

"In the case of the 'Follies' I was only called in during the last three weeks of its out-of-town run and found it was going to be necessary to do the staging of the piece all over again if it was to have any chance at all. As a matter of fact, I don't think it cost a great deal of money, certainly no more than $40,000, but the entire mold of the production had to be recast and the organization revitalized. Its success after the New York opening upset all my own theories about musical shows and everybody else's, too, I guess."

So what, Mr. Shubert?

Raymond Bell, of the advertising and publicity department of the Loew theaters in Washington, under the direction of Lou Brown, confides that come March 1, he plans to step off the deep end. That is to say, on March 1, Mr. Bell will be joined in holy wedlock with Miss Virginia French, a charming young brunette, who is a native of Fairport, Va., but has been a resident of Washington for several years. Mr. and Mrs. Bell, following the marriage ceremony, will depart at once for a honeymoon in Florida, subsequently making their home in the Capital. Congratulations, best wishes, &c., &c., in anticipation of the event.

Miss Sten's Debut.

Tonight at 11:30 o'clock, Mr. Samuel Goldwyn is hosting the dramatic writers in and about Washington territory at a preview screening of his production of "Nana," starring Anna Sten, in Loew's Century Theater in Baltimore, Md.

This film play, adapted, as goes without saying, from the famous story by Emile Zola, has long been in preparation, the while, Miss Sten, a Russian importation, has been mastering the English language. This she is said to have completely accomplished. From the West Coast come rumors, hints, signs and portents that this is to be one of the notable films of recent years.

We are prepared to believe, insofar as Miss Sten's contribution to it is concerned, that this is true. Accompanying the invitation to the Batlimore screening was a handsome plate-paper brochure of Miss Sten as she appears in the various developments, periods and costumes of the story. It is a highly artistic booklet and presents the star of the picture as a glamorous and exotic young woman capable of as many divergent characteristics as a Garbo, Dietrich, Hepburn and Wieck, all rolled into one.

Upon this pictorial evidence alone, it would seem that Mr. Goldwyn's venture with a new screen personality can not miss.

A plaintive letter from Maxine Doyle, doing penance on the West Coast as a contract film player, betrays a virulent nostalgia. Like every one else who has lived here as long as three years, Maxine has discovered that Washington is a difficult place to get out of the blood. Having acquitted herself with high credit in a scene or two for a forthcoming picture, which she hopes will not be left on the cutting-room floor, she is now about to be loaned to RKO-Radio for a part in their production of "Finishing School." She was all set for a lead with Victor McLaglen and Eddie Lowe in a waterfront subject, but at the last moment—much to her credit—Charlie Rogers decided that she wasn't quite tough enough! And that, it seems, is the way it goes.

The December Champs.

According to the monthly tabulation of the Motion Picture Herald, six pictures enjoyed the distinction of being the box-office champions for the month of December. First place was given undisputedly to RKO-Radio's production of "Little Women," starring Katharine Hepburn.

Second place, similarly, was voted without controversy to M-G-M's "Dancing Lady," starring Joan Crawford, with Clark Gable and Franchot Tone.

Paramount's "Alice in Wonderland," starring Charlotte Henry and practically the entire stellar roster of the producing company, and United Artists' "Roman Scandals," now showing at the Palace, with Eddie Cantor starred, tied for third place.

Fourth place likewise resulted in a tie between Fox's "My Lips Betray," costarring Lilian Harvey and John Boles, and Universal's "Only Yesterday," costarring Margarate Sullavan and John Boles.

Through inadvertence, the current bookings at the Fairlawn Theater in Anacostia, D. C., were incorrectly listed in the neighborhood movie chart published in last Sunday's Post. Today, the attraction is Katharine Hepburn in "Little Women"; Wednesday and Thursday, Spencer Tracy and Claire Trevor in "The Mad Game"; Friday, Rex, "King of Wild Horses," and Saturday, "Myrt and Marge." The Fairlawn will be open throughout the week, installation of sound equipment not necessitating closing until one day next week. So now you know.

Burton Holmes travel talk devoted to a motor tour through Java, to be delivered in the National Theater this afternoon at 4:40 o'clock, promises to be one of the most interesting and picturesque of the current season of five lectures being presented in the National on Tuesday afternoons.

For the benefit of those in office, the hour of today's talk has been set back to 4:40 for the first time during the current series.

Fifi D'Orsay is working under difficulties as headliner of the stage bill at the Earle this week. Scared pink by the presence on the same bill of Capt. Proske's royal Bengal tigers, Mlle. D'Orsay loses at least 5 pounds every time one of the beasts lets go with a roar or a growl, or even a purr. For some odd reason, most of their growling is done while Fifi is doing her act and as she remarked to the audience Saturday night, "it's driving her nuts."

Nature's Compensation.

In Ben Hecht's Version of the Noel Coward Hit

In the screen version of "Design For Living," the roles created in the stage play by Noel Coward, the author, Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt are interpreted by Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins and Gary Cooper, pictured above in the order named, reading in the usual direction. With the exception of Miss Hopkins', the character names have been changed—which is nothing to what has happened to the rest of Mr. Coward's play. "Design For Living," however, is still bright entertainment, if you didn't see the original.

$5,000 Damage Suit Filed in Winchester

Winchester, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—P. H. Wakeman, of Middletown, has brought suit in the Circuit Court of Frederick County against J. O. J. Green, local coal operator.

The action asks $5,000 for injuries alleged as the result of Green's auto striking a wagon driven by Wakeman last February.

Four Youths Held As Auto Robbers

Stolen Goods Found Near Wreck Give Clue.

Martinville, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—A preliminary hearing will be held here February 1 for four youths of the Ferrum community in Franklin County charged with stealing merchandise valued at several hundred dollars from automobiles parked on the streets at night.

Tom Hash, Henry Menefee, Herman Shively and Dillard Nicholson, all of Ferrum, are the defendants. The first three admitted participation in the thefts and implicated Nicholson. All four are out on bond.

A Ford coupe found wrecked north of the city led to the arrests. Part of the stolen goods was found near the machine and police traced the owner.

British Rotary Leader To Speak at Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Herbert Schofield, of Loughborough, England, third vice president of Rotary International and a past president of Rotary in Great Britain, will speak at an intercity meeting here Thursday at 6:30 p. m. Delegations from Martinsville, Covington, Hot Springs, Christiansburg and Bedford are expected to attend.

Dr. Schofield is a scientist and engineer and principal of Loughborough College. He founded the Rotary Club of Loughborough in 1923. District Governor Jack Martin, of Suffolk, also is expected to attend.

Harper Rites Conducted.

Franklin, W. Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Funeral rites for Mrs. Anna Eliza Harper, 79, widow of G. W. Harper, were held from Harper Chapel by the Rev. W. C. Muncy. A daughter, Mrs. P. C. Stone, and a son, D. A. Harper, both of Cave, survive.

Jacob H. Campbell, 86, Augusta Countian, Dies

Staunton, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Ill for 14 months, Jacob H. Campbell, 86, died at his home near here Sunday. Funeral services were held yesterday, conducted by the Rev. Dr. G. G. Martin, assisted by the Rev. W. W. Sprouse. Burial was in Thornrose Cemetery.

Mr. Campbell, a native of Nelson County, spent most of his life in Augusta. He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Ella Dood, Mrs. John Hanover, and Mrs. E. O. Carr, this county; two brothers, William, of Buchanan; Francis, this county, and four sisters.

B. A. Michael, Cashier, Buried at New Hope

Staunton, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—B. A. Michael, 61, assistant cashier of the New Hope Bank, was buried in Mount Horeb Cemetery after services at the residence, conducted by the Rev. J. E. White and the Rev. B. B. Garber. He is survived by his widow, and a sister, Mrs. Lynwood Sandridge, of McGaheysville.

Mr. Michael came to New Hope from McGaheysville and for 33 years was associated with the late W. F. Fretwell in the mercantile business. After the death of Mr. Fretwell he became associated with the New Hope Bank.

Mrs. Fannie Fines Buried in Stafford

Widely Known Virginian Died in District.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Mrs. Fannie P. Fines was buried at her home in Stafford County after services in Washington, where she died.

The daughter of the late Stephen B. and Margaret E. Jett, of Stafford County, Mrs. Fines was widely known in this part of Virginia. She was a member of the Potomac Baptist Church.

Surviving are two sons, B. H. Fines, of King George, and Thomas T. Fines, of Washington; three daughters, Mrs. Annie Woolfrey and Miss Mamie Rollins, of Washington, and Mrs. Addle Staples, of King George; three brothers, C. B. and S. A. Jett, of Stafford, and L. A. Jett, of Washington, and three sisters, Mrs. Nannie F. Chinn, Mrs. Laura A. Bullock and Miss Gertrude W. Jett, all of Stafford.

National Y. W. C. A. Aid To Visit Roanoke Unit

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Mrs. Sherwood Anderson, who has charge of all industrial work of the National Y. W. C. A., will be a guest of the local association, Thursday and Friday. She will address the Eureka Club Friday evening.

Mrs. Anderson has been connected with the National board many years, but this week's visit will be her first here as a board representative.
